Silver Rider Upsets Senate, Halts Action On Loan Bill

Call for Showdown by Thomas Muddles Situation.

Parley Is Called With Roosevelt

Oklahoman in Lone Play to Attach Plan to Glass Bill.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Suddenly and dramatically, the silver issue was precipitated on the Senate floor late yesterday when Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, offered to the Glass loans-for-industry bill a rider providing for nationalization of the white metal, permissive purchases and the features of the original Dies bill.

Action was deferred, however, pending a conference between President Roosevelt and a committee representing the silver bloc. At the moment when Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, was arranging this meeting for Saturday, after it was found impossible to hold it yesterday, Senator Thomas demanded a showdown on the silver issue.

As a result of Thomas' unexpected action, which not only caused chagrin to Administration leaders in the Senate, but also angered some of the silverites, the exact status of the silver fight was not clear last night. Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson said he expected the Thomas proposal would be rejected as a rider to the Glass bill by a sizable majority.

Faux Pas Feared.

Thomas, who has assumed leadership of the silver fight during the illness of Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, acted yesterday as a lone wolf, it was understood. Some of his silver colleagues feared he had put them in the position of opening hostilities at a moment when negotiations were in progress with the White House to reconcile divergent viewpoints.

On the other hand, it was contended in some quarters that Thomas had made a strategic move by forcing action and thus had placed the silver bloc in an improved bargaining position for its meeting later in the week with President Roosevelt. Be this as it may, the out-

Police Besiege Reds in Paris

Women and Children Flee From Tenement When Fight Is Renewed.

Paris, May 2 (AP).—Communist hatred of police flared anew in street battles tonight among the teeming slums where May Day rioters had rained pistol fire and bricks on guards a few hours earlier.

Police reinforcements again besieged the huge tenement block which served as the Red citadel during sharp encounters between last midnight and 5.30 a. m. today, in which 20 Communists were injured.

In the first encounter—a sensational sequel to May Day—women and children in the crowded tenement—4,000 persons live in the 900 small flats—escaped injury although gaping holes in the inside walls show where plaster and bricks were dug out for missiles.

Two of the policemen who lay siege to the Red stronghold lay in hospitals tonight critically wounded by bullets. Eight other officers were less seriously hurt.

New York-Rome Fliers Hop Today

Sabelli and Pond Poised for Take-Off.

New York, May 2 (AP).—Final preparations by Cesare Sabelli and Capt. George Pond for taking off tomorrow on a New York-to-Rome flight heralded tonight the approach of the transatlantic flying season with at least nine ocean hops projected.

Sabelli, assured weather conditions were favorable, said he and Capt. Pond intended to hop off in the monoplane Leonardo da Vinci from Floyd Bennett Field at 8 a. m.

Since August, 1933, the two fliers repeatedly have tried to start a nonstop flight to the Italian capital. Adverse weather conditions forced abandonment of the take-off on each occasion.

Baker Strike Ends as Union Pay Is Raised

Ice Cream Agreement Near, But 1,500 Carpenters Remain Out.

Five hundred union bakers returned to work yesterday, ending a 36-hour strike over wages and forestalling a serious bread shortage in Washington.

Other developments in the ruffled labor situation in the Capital were the refusal of contractors to yield to union carpenters' demands for $1.37½ cents an hour, partial settlement of the ice cream makers' walkout, and the possibility of a strike by drivers of ice cream trucks.

A compromise agreement on wage scales for bakers, apprentices and helpers was reached at a conference of union officials and representatives of the Employing Bakers Association, which was arranged by Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department commissioner of conciliation.

It provides that bakers shall receive $1.02 an hour for day work and $1.22 for night work. The union had demanded $1.05 and $1.25, previously rejecting offers of $1 and $1.20 The old scale was 90 cents and $1.08

Wirt's Attack Irks Woman Labor Leader

Miss Schneiderman to Sue Unless Retraction Is Made, She Says.

Vexed because friends reported Dr. William A. Wirt referred to her as "Rose of Anarchy," Miss Rose Schneiderman, colorful trade union leader and a member of the NRA Labor Advisory Board, yesterday said she planned to sue the Indiana educator unless he retracted his statement.

Earlier the charges of Dr. Wirt that brain trusters planned a coup d'etat were described as untrue in a majority report of a special House Investigating Committee, which recommended that the case be dropped.

However, in a caustic minority report, Representative Harold McGugin, Kansas, and Frederick Lehlbach, New Jersey, Republicans, contended the committee "by a studied effort refrained" deliberately from obtaining the information it was intended to produce.

Miss Schneiderman fairly bristled with indignation as she unfolded a graphic account of a speech she declared Wirt made recently in Chicago.

Fourth Wife Sues Gilbert for Divorce

Brands Screen Lover as "Arrogant and Abusive."

Los Angeles, May 2 (AP).—John Gilbert, screen lover, was described as "arrogant, violent and abusive," in a divorce complaint filed here today by his fourth wife, Virginia Bruce Gilbert, formerly of the Follies.

During their entire married life—one year and eight months—the actor repeatedly belittled her intelligence and ability in the presence of friends and members of her family, she complained.

Three previous divorces had been registered in the matrimonial career of Gilbert, terminating marriages successively to Olivia Burwell, Leatrice Joy and Ina Claire.

Astronomers All Over Globe Watch Storm Sweeping Jupiter

Cleveland, May 2 (AP).—Astronomers in many parts of the world trained powerful telescopes tonight on the planet Jupiter to study a violent, storm-like disturbance that has been putting a mysterious blotch on the old man's complexion.

Roughly 400,000,000 miles from the earth, the disturbance has been churning the planet's layer of atmosphere over an area 2,000 miles wide and 20,000 miles long.

Jupiter's newest breaking out was observed for the first time, at least in the United States, last Sunday night by Prof. J. J. Nassau, director of the Warner & Swasey Observatory, Cleveland. He is professor of astronomy in the Case School of Applied Science.

The storm appeared like a "white spot" in the planet's south equatorial belt, Prof. Nassau said.

The following night he was able to get only an unsatisfactory glimpse of the mysterious disturbance, but last night he saw it clearly again. In 48 hours it had twisted into a greatly changed shape and grown slightly smaller, he said.

Unlike sun spots, the phenomenon on Jupiter has no known effect upon the earth, Prof. Nassau asserted. Besides being a tremendous distance from the world, Jupiter, although more than ten times as large as the earth, is one of the "deadest" of all the planets.

Nassau discovered the storm while observing a black spot in the south equatorial belt.

He believes the black spot was the result of an atmospheric condensation, and the white spot a cloud of undetermined atmospheric material erupted to the surface by unexplained forces.

Bloody Auto Gives Clew To Dillinger

Police Start New Search of Desperado's Haunts.

Police prepared for a re-combing of his haunts after finding late today the blood-stained automobile stolen by Dillinger henchmen from a south St. Paul man in the mad dash from raided Little Bohemia in northern Wisconsin a week ago.

The car was found abandoned on a street on the north side. It was fitted with Illinois license plates, but was readily identified as the Minnesota-licensed machine by its motor numbers.

The front seat was stained with blood. Policeman James Dyer, of the automobile detail, said apparently one of the passengers had been wounded in the back. A pile of bandages, in the car when it was stolen, were there, and some of them had been used. There were no bullet holes in the machine, but the rear window had been knocked out, a common practice, police said, with gangsters who expect to have gun battles. Several empty cartridges from a .45 caliber pistol lay on the floor.

Baby's Crib Untouched.

A baby's crib and blankets, also in the car when stolen, were found in the rear seat.

The abandoned car was of the same type as that driven by the gunmen who slugged a suburban Bellwood policeman with a machine gun barrel Sunday night.

Several empty books of paper matches advertising the resort of Little Bohemia, where Dillinger and his gang spent several days in hiding, also were found in the car.

In the rear seat was a copy of a Dubuque, Iowa, newspaper telling of the search for the Dillinger gang, indicating to police that at least some of them had been in Iowa during the last two weeks.

The car was stolen April 23, the day after the shooting in the North woods, from Roy Francis, South St. Paul, who was terrorized by Dillinger mobsmen along with his wife and baby.

Girl Friend Arraigned.

Meanwhile, other developments in the feverish Dillinger hunt were: His part-Indian sweetheart, Evelyn Frechette, pleaded not guilty to charges of harboring him when arraigned at St. Paul. The United States district attorney immediately asked bail be set at $60,000. A defense attorney countered with a plea for $10,000 bail and said an immediate trial would be sought.

The Illinois plates on the car were said to have been issued to a man in Freeport, indicating the gangsters had passed through that city on their flight here.

Police said they were confident that two other and possibly three members of the Dillinger mob were in the city. George (Baby Face) Nelson was identified by police as being with Dillinger in the suburban fight Sunday night and police said they believed that John Hamilton accompanied his chief.

Homer Van Meter, another of the gang, has been identified as one of a gang that robbed a suburban bank since the escape in Wisconsin.

Armored Car Will Guard Gang Victim

"My Life Isn't Worth a Cent," Woman in Hospital Says.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine, wounded gunman's sweetheart, will be brought to Washington in an armored car as soon as she is able to be moved, it was learned yesterday.

She will be held here and questioned by Department of Justice agents, to whom she already has talked freely, it was further reported. Federal authorities at her bedside in Delaware County Hospital, in Upper Darby, Pa., where she has struggled for life since she was shot mysteriously April 26, are said to have learned from Mrs. Fontaine the names of seven men, members of a ring of gangsters who operated in New York, Washington and the South.

Four of them have been reported under arrest in Richmond, Va., while the chief of the hijacking gang is believed to be in Washington, where the Department of Justice and the Metropolitan Police are trying to trap him.

Sought in Cigarette Theft.

Despite the utmost secrecy, it was learned on good authority last night that the seven men are wanted as members of the ring that hijacked $30,000 worth of cigarettes from a truck near Weldon, N. C., more than a month ago. They are wanted for three murders, a $60,000 bank robbery in Richmond, a kidnaping and numerous robberies.

Meanwhile, fear that gangland may strike in a sudden effort to silence the woman's tongue, yesterday led Federal authorities to place Mrs. Fontaine under double guard in a private room at the hospital. Two guards are stationed inside with the woman, and a third, heavily armed, paces outside, near the hospital entrance.

"They tried to get me once," signed Mrs. Fontaine yesterday. "They'll get me yet. I know they will. My life isn't worth a red cent. Put them behind bars—electrocute them—before I get well."

The pretty sweetheart of William Benjamin Phillips, gunman and hijacker, slain by Policeman John A. Caton on Adams Mills road at Ontario place northwest, April 12, now is expected to recover from a wound in her back, which at first, she insisted was self-inflicted.

Armored Car Chased.

Early yesterday an armored car, identified as belonging to the gangsters, was chased by a police car on the Philadelphia highway, near Upper Darby. Its occupants were heavily armed, and authorities lost it when it speeded up a side road into the darkness.

The car bore Maryland license plates, and authorities in Maryland were warned to keep a lookout for it. It is believed the driver and his companions were searching for a way to put Mrs. Fontaine "on the spot."

The companion of Phillips, whose "live-hard, fight-hard, die-hard" credo tatooed on his leg was revealed when his body was taken to the morgue, Mrs. Fontaine was shot as she slept in an Upper Darby apartment April 26.

She is a Canadian, who is said to have deserted her husband, Joseph Fontaine, a Montreal steel worker. Her family reside in Ottawa.

Questioned By Detectives.

Soon after the shooting, Detective Floyd Truscott and Elmer Lewis left for Upper Darby to question the woman. Later they returned to Washington.

Yesterday they left headquarters again, although their destination was not revealed. It is believed they returned to Upper Darby.

At the time of the shooting, a loaded pistol and shotgun were found in the apartment occupied by Mrs. Fontaine. At the curb was an automobile, with blood stained cushions.

Blood transfusions were resorted to in order to keep Mrs. Fontaine alive. Her condition has improved greatly within the last 24 hours, the hospital reported.

Granny Scolded It Wasn't Proper, But Hear the Doc!

Grandmother didn't know this, but her's was good advice when she said it wasn't nice for young women to cross their knees.

Dr. Walter Freeman told the District Medical Society session yesterday that a paralysis of the legs requiring several weeks or months of recovery might be caused by that habit.

When one's legs are crossed and the toes begin to tingle with the "going to sleep" sensation, it is a pretty good sign that nerves are being injured. The injury comes through cutting off of circulation due to the pressure of one leg upon another.

NRA Not Needed Now, Assert C. of C. Leaders; Better Business Hailed

House Votes 5 Sections Of Market Control Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

Partisan recriminations and sharp debate, in which "the little red house in Georgetown" and its residents prominently figured, yesterday marked House approval of the first five sections of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill for stock market control.

In the thick of the fray, Benjamin Cohen, Government lawyer, who lives in "the little red house in Georgetown" and who aided in drafting the bill, left the floor. He had seated himself beside Chairman Sam Rayburn, who is handling the measure.

Cohen left just before Representative Fred Britten (Republican), of Illinois, called House attention to his presence, charging the lawyer and Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney, "sat in with the committee in executive session and practically wrote the legislation."

The reference to Cohen precipitated an immediate flare-up on both sides of the chamber. Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Republican), Massachusetts, declared his presence "a plain violation of the rules."

Rayburn took up the defense at once, insisting it was "customary" for a committee to have guidance from Government experts during consideration of a measure.

The dispute became so heated, as members of both sides clamored to be heard, that Representative John

Court Rules NRA Illegal In Coal Case

Kentucky Federal Judge Says Application Is Unconstitutional.

Louisville, Ky., May 2 (AP).—On the ground that the NRA bituminous coal code is unconstitutional as applied to local business, Federal District Judge Charles I. Dawson today temporarily restrained the Government from forcing the code upon unwilling operators in western Kentucky. He set May 11 for a hearing on a permanent injunction.

"To my mind," Judge Dawson explained, "the unconstitutionality of the act as it applies to local business is simple and conclusive. Looking at the code in its most favorable light, it can be no more than a private contract, with the President acting as umpire."

"If I accept it as a contract, it is perfectly ridiculous to subject one of the parties to a fine by the Government. If it is a contract, the district attorney has no right to proceed against one of the parties." He added he was not "conceding that the code is a contract and reserve jurisdiction on that point."

The operators, with $50,000,000 invested in the mines, chiefly in Hopkins, Muhlenberg, Union and Webster Counties, protested vigorously when the code was formulated providing for $4.60 for seven hours' work. Formerly the scale was $4 for eight hours. On April 2 the mines, save for a few on contract work, closed, throwing some 11,000 men out of work. The injunction suit was filed before Judge Dawson April 3.

The court's order today was directed at District Attorney T. J. Sparks. Part of the petition referring to J. R. Lyman, State compliance director for NRA, was previously dismissed on the ground he lacked authority to initiate prosecutions.

In Washington, NRA officials withheld comment pending a conference on the ruling, but gave no indication of disturbance over Judge

Cheating Under AAA Charged In Cotton Belt

By Raymond Clapper.

Reports of pitiful conditions among ousted tenant farmers in the cotton belt and indications that landlords have unfairly deprived them of AAA benefits have caused Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to summon his directors of extension from Southern States for a conference here next week to devise plans for preventing eviction and insuring a square deal for those made helpless by their poverty.

An effort will be made to enforce acreage reduction contract terms for sharing benefit payments between landlord and tenant, Secretary Wallace said.

Arrangements will be made so that tenants may report their troubles to AAA representatives for investigation and attention.

At the same time the Federal Emergency Relief Administration has instructed its county directors to ascertain which landlords have thrown tenants off of their land in the acreage reduction program. County directors have been instructed to determine in such cases whether landlords will be willing to have tenants move back on their land and to turn in to Washington names of land owners with whom they are unable to make arrangements for employing the normal number of tenants.

Tenants Suffer.

In short, a survey disclosed a tendency among some landlords—though Secretary Wallace believes the overwhelming number are cooperating fairly—to take the bene-

U. S. Workers Starving, European Press Says

Geneva, May 2 (AP).—Exaggerated reports, some even alleging that American Government employes are "facing starvation," are being sent some European newspapers in consequence of Washington's tardiness in paying exchange allowances to foreign representatives.

Prentiss B. Gilbert, United States consul here, was understood today to have sent a strongly worded cablegram to Washington concerning the situation, with the hope of hastening official action.

French Seize 'Dangerous Spy' Through 'Love Letter' System

Paris, May 2 (AP).—Police announced today the arrest of a "dangerous spy," who, they said, bought French defense secrets for Germany through want ads and gained information by communications worded like love letters. One of his alleged agents also was taken into custody.

Secret police said the prisoner is St. Islas Krauss, a former Polish army officer, and that his confession of an ingenious espionage system led to the arrest of Capt. Froge, of the French army.

Although authorities spoke earlier of "German spy organizations," they indicated tonight that only two had been arested, and that this new case involved no band like the alleged international syndicate with which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz, of New York and New Jersey, are said to have admitted dealings. The Switzes are in jail.

Krauss, who is suspected of spying in France the last four years under a variety of names, resorted to want ads when he lost track of Froge whom he met in 1931, police disclosed.

The Pole was arrested in a Paris street after he had been handed a decoy roll of bills by counter-espionage agents in the famous Tuileries Gardens in exchange for official documents.

The rendezvous was arranged by means of letters signed "Germaine," in which terms of endearment hid the real meaning.

Krauss had been trailed by secret operatives since February, when police investigated classified advertisements in Paris newspapers, in which "M. Tworyt" offered to lend money to government workers and army officers on easy terms.

Securities Act, Exchange Control Bill Targets at Convention.

Recovery Set-up Praised, Criticized

Leaders Admit Progress, But Assail Further U. S. Control.

By Felix Bruner.

Leaders of American trade and industry, addressing the United States Chamber of Commerce convention, yesterday expressed the feeling that while business has shown marked improvement under present Government regulation, it would now like to be given an opportunity to go ahead without further interference.

Out of a mass of more than 30 speeches delivered at various meetings in connection with the convention, this feeling appeared to emerge as the consensus.

Expressions ranged from almost unqualified approval of the Government's recovery program to almost unqualified disapproval, but most of the speakers took a middle course.

Particular Government regulation to which there was apparently unanimous disapproval included the securities act and the Fletcher-Rayburn stock exchange bill.

The business round-up and analysis of the New Deal program, was opened by Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who had considerable to do with the formation of the recovery program.

Voices Optimism.

Harriman told the convention that there was in the business situation "reason for conservative optimism."

"The roll of the men and women who were out of work in February, 1933, included nearly 13,000,000 people," he said. "Today it is not even 7,000,000, and from this number must be deducted 3,000,000 who are normally out of work, leaving the present excess of the unemployed around 4,000,000 of our people."

General business, he said, has improved, as indicated by a rise in the index of business activity from 61.7 in February, 1933, to 78.5 in March, 1934.

"If I rightly sense the judgment of business men on the workings of the industrial recovery act, it is that the law has done much good," he said, "and that the foundations

Peace Nears In Auto Trade

Detroit, May 2 (AP).—The settlement of a three-weeks' old strike in the tool and die industry and reliable reports of an impending settlement of strikes in the Fisher Body Corporation plants in eight cities, threw a more hopeful light on the labor situation as the automobile labor board, employers and employes continued their conferences tonight.

In a statement issued by the labor board this afternoon, it was pointed out that the decline in production in the Fisher plants at St. Louis and Cleveland had raised a question about the immediate re-employment of all workers in those plants.

It was understood that a basis for collective bargaining in the Fisher plants with the men instead of plant managers, had been reached, and that an accord on the wage dispute was imminent. A study commission to investigate the problems of the workers in the plants also may come out of the conference.

Katharine Hepburn Gets Secret Decree

Merida, Yucatan, Mexico, May 2 (U.P.).—Katharine Hepburn, film star, has obtained a secret divorce from Ludlow Ogden Smith, of New York and Philadelphia, it was learned tonight.

Details of the suit were discovered after Miss Hepburn left today by airplane for Havana and Miami, Fla.

Miss Hepburn obtained her divorce on grounds of "deep disagreement as to life," the papers showed.

Labor Report Angers Japan, Who May Bolt

Geneva Survey Bares Huge Oriental Trade Gains in World Marts.

Geneva, Switzerland, May 2 (AP).—A report of Harold B. Butler, American director of the international labor conference committee, on Japan's labor and monetary conditoins aroused such resentment in Japanese circles here tonight that they threatened to bolt the organization.

"Japanese industry organized on modern lines has become the most formidable competition in the world's markets," Butler says in his survey to be presented at a coming labor convention.

"The comparative reduction of Japanese wages in terms of other currencies is so considerable as to give a decisive advantage to Japanese industry in the international market.

The report hinted that the successful Japanese invasion of foreign markets, "commonly called a form of dumping, is due to excessively low wages and bad labo rconditions."

Grave tensions and antagonisms between nations have resulted from economic nationalism, the bureau warned through Butler's report.

Butler added that both political upheavals and aggressive nationalism were likely to provoke international conflict unless "the economic fever which caused them can be allayed."

Jackson Urges Unit Handling Of State Cash

Baltimore Mayor Talks to Maryland U. Students on Governorship.

College Park, Md., May 2 (AP).—Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, speaking as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, tonight told University of Maryland students that if elected he intended to eradicate duplication of State functions and to put handling of State funds under central supervision.

"There has been some reorganization and coordination of State agencies as to executive management," Mayor Jackson said, "but the task of coordinating the activities themselves so as to prevent duplication of services, still remains to be performed."

In discussing what he hoped to do as to supervision of finances, Mayor Jackson referred to the record of his administration in Baltimore.

"On March 13 last, I had handed to me by the bureau of control and accounts the first complete financial statement, showing all assets and liabilities of Baltimore City, ever compiled in the history of the city, and, I believe, ever compiled by any municipality in the country. It was the culmination of work begun in my first administration in 1923, and gives in detail all the data usually found in financial statements of great industrial institutions.

"If I may be allowed a personal note, I would like to say that I hope to be able, if given the opportunity, to produce for the State of Maryland a financial statement of the same character as that which the City of Baltimore will now prepare and publish at regular periods."

Mayor Jackson made only one direct reference to Gov. Ritchie who as yet is silent as to reelection, saying "this institution owes much to Gov. Ritchie."

Old Fort Stevens Has More Trouble

Park police yesterday reported the copper halyard attached to the flagpole had been stolen, possibly by someone who wanted to use it as a radio aerial or clothesline. The metal box in which the line was contained had been pried open.

Paired Up

Driver Gets Ticket While He's Being Tried.

Life has its ups and downs, but William Maenner, trucker, of Baltimore, has decided the "downs" are in the majority.

Brought into the Hyattsville Police Court yesterday on charges of reckless driving and inadequate brakes in connection with striking and severely injuring Lorraine Herbert, 13, at Bladensburg recently, he paid a fine of $11.

On leaving the court, Maenner discovered the trial had taken so long that an overtime parking ticket had been placed on his car, parked in front of the County Offices Building.

How Bakers Act When They Win More 'Dough'

10-cent increase in each class. Under the new one-year contract, which the local said would be signed today, bakers' apprentices also receive increases averaging about $3 a week.

Settlement of the strike, which affected approximately 85 per cent of the Capital's bread and baked goods output, averted an acute shortage which already was felt in scores of chain and independent retail stores. Throughout yesterday the bakers' union office at 426 Fifth street northwest was flooded with telephone calls from persons wanting to know where they could buy union bread, said Charles B. McClosky, business agent.

Wild cheering from the 500 bakers assembled at the Typographical Temple to await the outcome of the Hotel Mayflower conference greeted McClosky's announcement that the employers had raised the ante 2 cents. Within 20 minutes they were on their way back to work.

Ice Cream Peace Near.

Early termination of the ice cream workers' strike, which began yesterday morning, was foreshadowed when two of the six plants affected accepted the union's terms, according to McClosky. They are Melvern Dairies and Washington Maid, Inc.

The ice cream makers, who are affiliated with the bakers' union, are demanding an increase from $5.50 to $6.50 a day for skilled labor, $4 to $5 for unskilled and $3.50 to $4 for pint wrappers. They have a six-day, 48-hour week, while the bakers, since last January, have worked a five-day, 40-hour week.

At a meeting of the ice cream workers yesterday, R. A. Dickson, president of the Central Labor Union, pledged his organization's support and urged them to conduct their strike without violence. The American Federation of Government Employes also announced it is behind the union's demands.

50 Remain on Strike.

Four ice cream plants have yet to reach an agreement and the 50 union men and women whom they employ did not report for work yesterday. They are Southern Dairies, Carry's, Colonial and Fussell-Young.

The walkout of carpenters—1,500 according to the union's district council—enters its third day today with no prospect of contractors capitulating to demands for $1.37½ an hour on a 30-hour week basis.

Following a meeting yesterday of 48 contractors and construction company representatives, this statement was issued by the Master Builders Association:

"It was unanimously agreed that the offer of $1.10 per hour on an eight-hour basis, as submitted by the association, was eminently fair and that there was no justification for an increase in the rate to $1.37½ per hour on a six-hour day basis, as demanded by the local carpenters' union.

Raise Held Impractical.

"The Master Builders Association and the other contractors take the stand that every effort is being made to stimulate and create more private building in Washington and they feel that any advance above the offer of $1.10 per hour made by them would retard private building and injure the opportunity of both the builder to secure contracts and the carpenter to obtain employment.

"The offer made by the association compares favorably with the rates paid carpenters in other surrounding cities and the builders, after careful consideration, have decided to refuse the demand of the local carpenters' union, but are willing to renew their offer of $1.10 per hour on an eight-hour basis."

The contractors' determined stand means completion of the new Federal buildings in the triangle, as well as private construction throughout the city, will be held up unless the striking carpenters consider the compromise. At present they are receiving $1 an hour for a five-day, 40-hour week.

Cheating by Landlords Under AAA Is Charged in Cotton Belt

Secretary Wallace made public yesterday a critical survey of conditions under the AAA cotton program, made by Calvin B. Hoover, professor of economics at Duke University, who was employed by AAA as an agricultural adviser for this purpose.

"It is plainly the duty of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to spare no efforts in preventing the unequal distribution of the advantages of the acreage reduction program, and particularly to prevent the operation of that program from making the situation of any class of producers worse," Dr. Hoover said.

While asserting that the recovery program had greatly improved conditions in the South, Dr. Hoover was frank to say that various undesirable effects and instances of hardship to individuals had occurred in connection with the cotton program.

Some, he said, were due to the terms of the Government cotton contracts, others to misinterpretation of them or to violation.

Effects Summarized.

He summarized these undesirable effects as follows:

1. In a considerable number of cases tenant farmers have not received the full amount specified by the cotton benefit payment contract.
2. Reduction of acreage has induced reduction in the number of tenants on farms. Although the Government contracts contain provisions intended to prevent this, enforcement has been inadequate.
3. Percentage of benefit payments to tenants and share croppers is less in the case of cotton contracts than in other commodities.
4. Terms of the contracts fail to make sufficiently clear classifications in the types of tenantry. It is upon these different classifications that the division of benefit payments as between landlords and tenants depends.

Landlords, Dr. Hoover says, were permitted to sign contracts both for themselves and their tenants, but only with consent of the tenants. Checks could be made payable either jointly or to the landlord alone if the tenant waived his right.

"In numbers of cases," he continued, "landlords did not obtain the consent of their tenants before signing the contract. They simply made no mention of having tenants who had an interest in the crop. Consequently, checks for benefit payments were often made out in the name of the landlord alone. He was thus given an opportunity to make any kind of settlement with his tenants which he wished."

Debts Deducted.

Landowners also obtain tenant shares of cotton option payments, Dr. Hoover reported. In many cases debts due landlords were deducted from benefit payments with usurious interest charged in.

"Whether the tenant received anything at all often depended upon the charitableness of the landlord," the investigator added. Often tenants in signing leases have been required to surrender all claims to Government benefit payments, although AAA has refused to accept contracts when such practices have been discovered.

Much complaint was found that cotton contracts provided that share croppers were to receive only one-ninth of the benefit payments, whereas in tobacco contracts they were given one-half.

Dr. Hoover said that it was argued in favor of this striking division that landlords could not be induced to sign up unless given a large share of the benefits, and that the larger the share of the tenant, the greater the incentive to reduce the number of tenants. On the other hand, it was argued that the tenant was compensated by being able to grow food crops for his own use on the idle land.

Another Loophole.

Another loophole pointed out by the investigator was that contracts required no division of benefit payments with hired labor.

"Consequently the temptation exists for landlords to replace tenants with day laborers, since tenants have some rights in the contract, while laborers do not," Dr. Hoover said.

Conditions which are accentuated by maladjustments under the cotton program have been piling up for several years as industrial unemployment forced thousands out of cities back to the farms.

"Due to these causes there has been accumulating during the past four or five years in the South a steadily increasing number of squatter families," Dr. Hoover said. "These families formerly were able to obtain a crop to tend, but are now unable to do so. Many of them are living in tumble-down tenant houses and tobacco barns and any sort of shack which they can find.

"Their standard of living is appalling and is even much below the customary low standard of living of tenant farmers who are engaged in production. The rehabilitation of these squatter families is demanded by every consideration of National responsibility."

Theft Is Laid To Contractor

Firm Head Indicted in $25,000 Loss Attributed to Paded Pay Rolls.

A $25,000 theft from the B. W. Construction Co., builders of the City Postoffice annex, was charged to John F. LeBeau, head of a plumbing and heating contracting company, by the District grand jury yesterday. Michael E. Daly, his foreman, was named as a principal in the alleged plot.

He is accused of "padding" a pay roll from $35,000 to $60,000 by bringing in strangers to receive pay envelopes. The Government alleged that LeBeau received the greater portion of this money. Bond is expected to be posted this morning.

Another indictment alleged that LeBeau had neglected to deposit at the District Building $1,500 which had been given him by the construction company for sewer and water costs. The indictment charges him in this connection with larceny after trust.

Cannon Ouster Move to Hinge On Vote Today

Jackson, Miss., May 2 (AP).—Fundations for mighty conflicts were laid today in the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as the conference set up its new judicial council to pass on the constitutionality of church law and ordered balloting on momentous questions affecting the 11active members of the college of bishops.

Under two special orders of business, the hundreds of delegates will vote tomorrow on the question of limiting the tenure in office of the bishops, who now are elected virtually for life, and on a proposal to place on the retirement list any bishop who is found to be "so unacceptable, inefficient, or secular as to be no longer useful in his work."

The commitee on Episcopacy recommended that the retirement age of 72 years, now in force, remain in the discipline with provision for retirement of a bishop earlier for inacceptability or inefficiency.

If the latter proposal passes and is ruled binding without having to be submitted to the annual conferences for ratification or rejection, it was predicted by delegates favoring the retirement of Bishop James Cannon, jr., Richmond, that it would furnish a new rule under while the Cannon case could be brought to the floor.

The committee on episcopacy is expected this week to report to the conference their recommendation that the 69-year-old Bishop Cannon be retired against his consent and it is understood their decision was based on the present disciplinal provision governing retirement for "infirmities."

If the new retirement proposal is passed the judicial council will likely be called upon to decide whether it has to be submitted to the annual conference for ratification.

New Charges Of Fraud Name Long, Overton

(United Press.)

Charges that Louisiana's two Senators—Huey P. Long and John H. Overton—were guilty of fraud in connection with the latter's election were placed before the Senate Privileges and Election Committee yesterday.

Samuel T. Ansell, counsel for the Women's Committee of Louisiana, which is seeking removal of Long and Overton, asked the committee to investigate:

1. The use of dummy candidates in Louisiana.
2. The levying, collecting and expenditure of campaign funds.
3. The failure to maintain a Republican form of government.

"There is no question," Ansell said, "but that the special Senate committee which investigated the Overton-Broussard primary really did not investigate Senator Long and his activities except so far as was incidentally in the pursuit of what it considered its primary object."

Given Chance to Answer.

Chairman Walter F. George, of the committee, said Overton and Long would be given an opportunity to answer charges. Overton said he was undecided whether to make any presentation of his case to the committee. Long was absent. The hearings on petitions to oust Long and Overton will continue today.

Ansell attacked the dummy candidate system in Lousiana, and said that while the Louisiana Supreme Court had criticized the practice it had held it had no authority to act against it.

Anslell said the special committee did not go far enough "to connect Senator Overton's personal fraud with the fraud uncovered at the primary election."

"The committee said there was no direct evidenec that Senator Overton was a participant in that fraud," he said.

"But it is very difficult, unusual and probably never possible to prove fraud by direct evidence. Fraud is not proved by direct evidence.

Charges New Orleans Fraud.

"But in New Orleans that committee found the election permeated with fraud and the possibility of fraud in at least a third of the precincts of the State."

Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, asked if Ansell intended to show that if fraudulent ballots weer cast out the results would have been different.

"I don't think we know enough about it to say that," Answell answered. "But fraud was so general that it would be impossible to form a rule of mathematics to show the exact proportion."

He blamed this situation on the fact that penalties for violation of election laws had been removed.

No Election Laws, Claim.

"There are really no laws existing in Louisiana for the purpose of maintaining the purity of elections," he said. "Laws enacted have had their teeth pulled by the supreme court in striking out penalties.

"But there is no doubt that the law never contemplated anything but bona fide candidates."

Senator Felix Hebert (Republican), Rhode Island, asked:

"Isn't it your view that the election was so vitiated with fraud that it vitiated it entirely?"

"Yes. When the practices become so general and so potent and so widespread, it can be said they permeate the whole. There can be but one thing, that fraud was so general as to vitiate the whole procedure."

Insull Says He'll Be 'Flat Broke' On Reaching U.S.

Aboard S. S. Exilona at Sea, May 2 (U.P.).—Samuel Insull will be "flat broke" when he arrives in New York next week to face fraud charges growing out of the collapse of his utilities empire.

The former Chicago millionaire made his revelation today when given his customs blank to fill out, along with other passengers. He filled it out as an American, giving Athens as his last place of residence.

Asked if he had anything to declare, Insull laughed and replied:

Receivership Plea Heard in Annapolis

Maryland ublishing Co., Case on Appeal.

Annapolis, Md., May 2 (AP).—Receivership for the Maryland Publishing Co., dissolution of the corporation and an injunction against E. Brooke Lee, were argued today before the Court of Appeals.

The action was instituted in the Montgomery County Circuit Court in December, 1933, by John W. Coffman, a stockholder, who is his bill alleged fraud and mismanagement, requested a receiver and asked an injunction against the transfer of certain notes of the corporation held by Lee. A general demurrer to the bill was filed. When the demurrer was sustained by the lower court, the appeal followed.

It was pointed out that the corporation was formed in 1927 and that Lee, from the beginning, has been president and in active control and management.

Wagner Labor Bill Is Speeded

Revised Measure Expected to Cause Hot Battle Before Senate.

After a conference with President Roosevelt, Senator Robert F. Wagner yesterday announced that his labor disputes bill, slightly modified, but containing the same objectives as the original measure, will be ready in a day or two.

Expressing his belief that it would be enacted at this session, the New York Democrat added that the bill retains the establishment of a permanent labor board and provisions against "company-dominated" unions.

Only a few changes, minor in nature, were made in the bill, he said, declining to go into details. The bill is understood to bear the approval of President Roosevelt, who referred it to a committee composed of NRA officials and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

The Wagner bill, one of the most controversial measures before the Senate, has attracted widespread opposition from industry. Despite indications of a stiff fight, the Senator intends to press for early action, he said.

Help of Films Sought to Put NRA Across

Parley With News Reel Officials Is Revealed in New York.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

New York, May 2.—Representatives of the National Recovery Administration have appealed to the newsreel companies for cooperation in a plan to bolster the NRA in the public mind through favorable weekly news features, the United Press was reliably informed today.

Representatives of the newsreel companies, to whom the program was suggested by NRA representatives, were said to have agreed to a tentative program at a meeting last week in the local offices of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors, the Will Hays organization.

Harry Scott, local NRA publicity man, said he could not comment as he understood the arrangement had not been officially approved at Washington. At Washington Charles F. Horner, NRA publicity chief, said he did not ask the help of the newsreel men, but had told them he would be glad to cooperate in making any shorts they desired in connection with the Recovery Administration.

Horner at N. Y. Meeting.

Horner and Scott attended the meeting here, the United Press was informed, at which there were representatives of each of the newsreel companies—Paramount, Universal, Pathe, Fox and Metrotone.

It was understood that NRA representatives told the news reel men the Administration felt the need of favorable publicity before an extensive public audience to counteract recent hostile publicity.

Arthur De Bra, of the Hays office, said the NRA men had approached the news reel companies for advice on keeping the public informed on the routine progress of the NRA and of the second or permanent phase of the recovery program, which lacked the news value of the first phase because of its lack of novelty.

The news reel men agreed that they couldn't create news out of the present situation in the NRA, De Bra said, but that if the progress of the NRA could be tied up with certain personalities—if Henry Ford or Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors, were to speak on the subject—such material could be used.

Denies U. S. Men "Worried."

De Bra denied that the Government representatives were "worried" over criticism of the recovery program. He said they were "concerned" over the problem of keeping the NRA before the public now that virtually all of the novelty of it has been exploited.

In addition to the expressions of industrial leaders on the NRA, it was proposed to have a symposium by persons who had been out of work and obtained jobs with the help of the NRA. It also was suggested that efforts be made to have Mrs. Grace Coolidge and Alfred E. Smith speak on the NRA, as well as representatives of smaller industries, and educators.

Newsreel companies, it was understood, did not obligate themselves to use the material, but agreed to cooperate if the subjects had any feature value.

The United Press was informed that the Hays office notified all the newsreel companies of the ceremonies incident to hoisting the new Blue Eagle flag over local NRA headquarters, suggesting it would make a newsreel subject. Similar suggestions were sent out, it was understood, regarding a talk at Washington in which Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel, explained what the second phase of the recovery program means to the individual.

Horner Denies Urging Publicity in Movies

Charles F. Horner, in charge of promotion activities of NRA, told The Post that he had gone to New York to confer with motion picture executives at the suggestion of his New York NRA representative, but that there was no thought of pressing news reels to give favorable publicity to the recovery drive.

Mr. Horner said he had told the news reel representatives that he would be glad to cooperate with them in anything that NRA could do, that it was suggested to him that short subjects of President Roosevelt and Gen. Johnson would be popular. Mr. Horner said, however, that he had been unable to get around to doing anything about the suggestions as yet.

Court Holds NRA Coal Code Illegal

Dawson's holding that NRA could not constitutionally regulate any business which did not conform to the traditional interpretation of interstate commerce.

J. Van Norman, attorney for the operators, said the mines would be reopened as soon as wage contracts can be signed with the independent miners' union on a $4 seven-hour-day scale. The latter, composed of what are known as "company unions," already has indicated its willingness to accept.

E. J. Morgan, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, said his union held that the miners should not work for less than the code scale.

have been laid for the orderly conduct of business.

"But I also sense a very widespread fear that an act, based on the self-regulation of business with Government approval of such regulation, may become an autocratic act, for the regimentation of business by the Government.

Too Many Codes Feared.

"There is a feeling that too many codes have been adopted, and that the entire codification of business is unnecessary and undesirable; that the codes have endeavored to regulate too minutely the functions of business; that, in the endeavor to promptly raise wages, costs have increased faster than the consuming power of the country, with resulting curtailment of business activity, and a lessening of employment; that in some cases the differentials in wage scales between different sections of the country have not been equitable and have tended to change business from one channel to another, and that the increased cost of certain articles has been out of proportion to increased costs of competing articles, with further changes in the channels of business."

Harriman added that mistakes were inevitable and that Government and business must cooperate to eliminate that which is bad and preserve that which is good.

"The chaos of unbridled competition," he continued, "can not be permitted to return. Some Federal agencies coperating with business must continue to carry out the major functions exercised by the NRA and AAA.

"This does not mean an era of bureaucratic control, but rather a regime of orderly economic freedom in which the industries themselves play their responsible part."

Westinghouse Head Speaks.

Speaking at the same meeting was A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Co.

"The treatment ailing business is receiving," he said, "reminds one of the patient who was purged, and when I say purged I mean purged; bled white with leeches at both wrists and temples; fed a powder of dried brains—and yet, said the old account, he died."

Robertson scored critics of business who assume that business is dishonest.

"Whoever ran our world in the past does not need to bow his head in shame or to apologize," he said. "I see no good reason for turning over its management to the control of those who have no recrd of performance back of them. But the statistics show only the superficial results. After all, what is it that enables private business to keep on from year to year and from generation to generation? In fact, it is no unusual thing to find a business unit surviving several generations.

"A study of the basic quality of all enduring business will disclose that it is based on integrity. This appears in many guises—but it is still integrity."

Robertson said there was little graft in business, few cases of business men banking more than their salaries.

"A planned economy is undoubtedly necessary," he said. "In a sense it has always been a planned economy, but we need better plans, not more plans.

Hits Berle's Stand.

"It may not make the slightest difference to A. A. Berle, jr., whether we have Communism, Socialism, Fascism or what-not, as he says, but it makes a heap of difference to some 123,000,000 other people in the United States."

At another meeting the president of the American Bankers Association, F. M. Law, while agreeing that business was materially improved, was equally certain that business men still had fears of a trend toward governmental control of business and heavy taxation.

Law added, however, that he still found the Nation strongly behind the President.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, told the delegates the President was "determined to balance the budget and he expects we will be on an even keel by 1936."

Charles F. Kettering, vice president of the General Motors Corporation, said he believed in planning ahead, but that he did not believe in necessarily sticking to a rigid course.

"I am very much for planning, but I am rather reluctant about acting," he said. "I think that tomorrow we are going to be as smart as we are today, and I do object to our trying to say today what we ought to do positively in five or ten years."

Kettering also pointed out that he feared that it would be difficult for science and business to develop under codes.

Securities Act Held Barrier to Recovery

Houston is chairman of the NRA advisory committee on heavy industries. He was appointed at the request of Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

Houston declared that remaining causes for lack of confidence can be removed by a "clear, unmistakable expression of intent" on the part of the Government:

(a) To encourage the profit motive in business.

(b) Not to interfere with business through further regulation.

(c) To balance the budget as soon as possible and cease to compete in the capital markets with private enterprise through a constantly expanding Government debt.

The securities act, he said, "has put the brakes on future investment."

"Industry is in accord with the Administration's desire to regulate the National securities exchanges and those trading on them for the correction of existing abuses and for the prevention of excessive speculation in the future," he said.

"It is opposed, however, to the indirect regulation of private business whose securities are traded in, to the regulation of thousands of small companies whose securities are not listed, or to the regulation of the ownership in such securities."

Cotton Curb Declared An Aid to Industry

Restriction of production under the cotton textile code has been of advantage to the industry, according to B. P. Gossett, president of the Chadwick Hoskins Co., Charlotte, N. C., and chairman of the plant extension committee of the Cotton Textile Code Authority. Gossett spoke yesterday at the manufacturing industries conference of the Chamber of Commerce convention.

The speaker pointed out that long before the NRA the industry was seeking a remedy from the danger of excess capacity. By shortening maximum hours of work, he said, 140,000 employes have returned to work and minimum wage provisions have increased pay rolls 100 per cent.

Robert H. Montgomery, a member of the firm of Lybrand, Ross & Montgomery, of New York, criticized NRA price-fixing provisions.

"If the world owes every man a living, if we can lift ourselves by our bootstraps, if we can make silk purses out of sows' ears, then the adoption of a standard cost formula as a useful element in the fixing of prices will help us on the road to recovery," he said.

"I would not use any cost formula as a protection to fair prices because I believe that prices must be based on present conditions much influenced by our estimates of future conditions.

"If prices were the sole impact of competition, and a concern is not permitted to sell below its own cost, the logical outcome would be the survival of the lowest cost producer in each industry and the extinction of his competitors."

Retailers Decline New Boosts in Wages

The Retail Dry Goods Association "respectfully declines" to increase wages further or to make further reductions in working hours, David Ovens, president of the association, told a United States Chamber of Commerce group yesterday.

"The department stores, by compliance with the code already have increased their pay rolls 15 per cent and added nearly 14 per cent more persons to these pay rolls," he said.

"It is our belief that we have done our share in solving the unemployed problem in retailing, and that strict attention for a longer trial period should be given to seeing that a more widespread compliance to the provisions of the present code is assured.

"The retail code is perhaps not a perfect instrument, but it has done great things, and has gone a long way toward eliminating many of the evils found in the retail field."

U. S. Control of Coal, Light and Oil Urged

Production control in the coal mining industry similar to the proposed cotton control legislation was advocated yesterday by John L. Steinbugler, president of William C. Atwater & Co., New York, before a group meeting of the Chamber of Commerce convention.

"Production control," he said, "is an economic necessity."

He declared that price control alone will not solve the problem. He suggested amendments to the coal code to provide for such production control, to be followed, if the plan works, by legislation establishing such control.

Samuel Ferguson, president of the Hartford Electric Light Co., Hartford, Conn., advocated further pooling of facilities of various power companies, as a means of lowering costs, increasing efficiency and adding to the consumption of power by industry.

Control of production also is necessary in the oil industry, Amos L. Beaty, director of Phillips Petroleum Co., told the conference.

"Federal legislation of some kind is undoubtedly essential," he said.

He pointed out that State control is not satisfactory because of differences in regulations between States.

Eddy Favors New Program of Works

Another substantial appropriation for public works was advocated yesterday at a Chamber of Commerce group meeting by Harrison P. Eddy, president of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Notwithstanding improvement in business conditions, an increase in unemployment probably can be expected next fall, he said. Much of the slack in unemployment can be taken up, he added, if the Government should proceed with additional public works construction, for which funds are not now available.

"The public works program in itself," he said, "is not a cure-all for depressed business conditions and unemployment. There is little doubt, however, that by the summer of 1934 it will have proven itself of material assistance to business activity and reemployment."

Harland Bartholomew, engineer for the St. Louis City Planning Commission, told the group of the work going on all over the country in the planning of future development of cities.

U. S. Tariff Program Upheld by Exporter

The tariff program of the Administration is not intended to handicap any industry, C. M. Peter, Towson, Md., exporter, told a United States Chamber of Commerce group yesterday.

"On the contrary," he said, "it will be used with discretion to promote a new policy of protection of National welfare rather than for the protection of 'localists' who desire individual and selfish welfare of particular localities or factories which wish to expand at the expense of the Nation as a whole.

"Ability on the part of our Administration to meet foreign nations on equal terms in trade treaty negotiations, coupled with adequate and efficient credit facilities through the Export-Import Bank, will place our country in a position to resume and hold its rightful place in the foreign trade of the world."

Wirt's Attack Angers Woman Labor Leader

Miss Schneiderman to Sue Unless Retraction is Made, She Says.

leader.' I don't like it. I have retained a lawyer to demand a retraction.

"He also said, among other things, that I went to the Virgin Islands in the interest of a Socialistic experiment sponsored by the brain trust. That isn't true."

The NRA official added she would file a civil suit for slander unless her attorney, Dorothy Kenyon, New York, drew an apology from Wirt.

She also announced she planned to sue Mrs. Elizabeth Dillon, whom, she said, wrote a privately circulated book, "The Red Network," in which she originally was dubbed "Rose of Anarchy."

Miss Schneiderman is secretary of the National Women's Trade Union League in addition to her work at NRA.

The House, which authorized the Wirt inquiry with an air of reluctance, probably will let the incident rest. For all practical purposes the investigation may be termed officially ended.

Charges Reviewed.

Although somewhat brief, the majority report was pointed. It reviewed Wirt's charges that certain officials or employes of the Government had informed him of a plot by brain trusters to overthrow the Government and to supplant President Roosevelt "with a Stalin."

The commitee examined six persons present at a dinner in the Virginia home of Miss Alice Barrows September 1, last, where the "revolution" was said by Wirt to have been discussed. The report said it was unnecessary to question other witnesses.

Evidence and testimony adduced at the hearings, the majority reported, "clearly show that the statements made by Dr. William A. Wirt * * * were not true and that the five persons in the employment of the United States Government and the newspaper correspondent who were present at the dinner did not make any such statements as were alleged to have been made by them to Dr. Wirt.

"From all the evidence presented to the committee, there was none whatever showing that there was any person or group in the Government service planning to 'overthrow the existing social order' or planning or doing any of the things mentioned in Dr. Wirt's statement."

In explanation of its failure to question Secretary Wallace, Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford G. Tugwell and other persons named during the hearings, the committee pointed out Wirt had not spoken to them.

The report then recommended no further action be taken. It was signed by Representative A. L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman; William Arnold (Democrat), Iillinois, and John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York.

McGugin protested the committee "deliberately suppressed" information. He accused the Democrats of being "fearful" of summoning such officials as Wallace and Tugwell. He said majority members used the hearing to "discredit" Wirt.

Witnesses Discussed.

The Kansan termed as "preposterous and unreasonable" the testimony of Miss Barrows' dinner guests that none of them made the statements quoted by Wirt. In answer to statements of majority members that the six persons were "minor personalities," McGugin commented:

"Five of them hold important key positions in various departments of the Government and are the oracles of those who are controlling Government. The sixth is an important and direct employe of the Soviet government.

"It is significant that these five people holding key positions in our Government should be in such close social relationship with Lawrence Todd, one of the foremost propaganda agents of the Soviet government in America."

Lehlbach complained the committee "booted away" its opportunity to learn the purpose of the Brain Trust.

"This was an utterly futile proceeding," he said. "Every well-informed person knows from the speeches, published writings and radio addresses of Government officials constituting what is commonly known as the Brain Trust that their political, economic and social philosophy is substantially as set forth by Dr. Wirt."

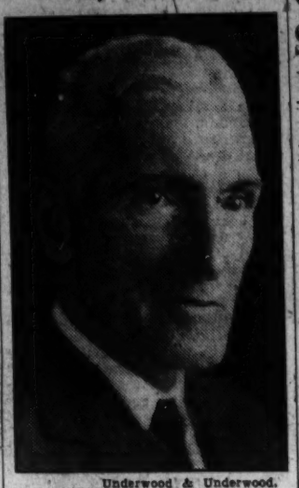
Manufacturer Dies



Underwood & Underwood.

WILLIAM C. PROCTER, soap manufacturer, noted for humane industrial innovations, who died yesterday in Cincinnati.

W. C. Procter, Humanitarian, Dies, Aged 72

Noted Manufacturer Was Pioneer in Benefits to His Employes.

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 2 (AP).—A two-family dynasty founded on soap came to an end today with the death of Col. William Cooper Procter, 72, whose humane industrial innovations made his passing mourned by every Procter & Gamble workman. He will be buried Friday.

Long before the "New Deal" became a Nation's byword, the man who succumbed to bronchial pneumonia today was placing many of its principles in effect while other industrialists stood aghast.

As early as 1885, Col. Procter astounded industry by granting his employes a Saturday half-holiday. He explained that he thought they would enjoy the extra leisure.

China, it was said, has granted Japan the right to control Kwantung and extra-territorial rights in parts of Hangkow and Tientsin.

Sir John's statement was intended to distinguish between these special rights and others, it was said.

"Japanese control of those areas is an accomplished fact, not recognized as special rights by China, nor is the 1905 treaty granting them," he said.

"Extra-territorial rights advanced to Japan by China are no different from those advanced to other powers."

The note of Cordel Hull, American Secretary of State, to Japan was described in Chinese legation quarters as "much stiffer and firmer" than the British Declaration.

Stella Mayhew, Once Stage Star, Dies Penniless

New York, May 2 (AP).—Stella Mayhew, who a week ago told friends she had 4 cents left of the fortune she had earned as a stage and vaudeville star a quarter of a century ago, died today in French Hospital.

Miss Mayhew, 59, died of septicemia as result of a cut she received on her ankle when she fell down a flight of subway stairs three weeks ago.

The actress, who began her career in the early eighties as an understudy in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in Pittsburgh, was at one time regarded as wealthy. Her investments were wiped out by the market crash and she had to sell her home to pay her debts.

China Regrets Simon Remark In Parliament

British Admission About Japan's Rights Held "Unfortunate."

London, May 2 (AP).—An unofficial Chinese spokesman described as "unfortunate" today the statement of Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon that Japan's "special rights in China are recognized by other powers."

Chinese statesmen were assured by Great Britain that Sir John's remark, made before the House of Commons in a speech, was intended to help China, and was a negative way of reaffirming that Britain does not recognize any Japanese claims to special rigts unaccepted by other powers.

His most recent action in their behalf was a guarantee of 48 weeks of work a year. To make good his promise, he gauged consumption and production carefully so that his plants operated at a constant normal pace. Surplus soap produced during slumps was stored in warehouses, to be drawn upon when demand increased.

Profit-sharing was large in his thoughts. Nearly $1,000,000 is distributed yearly to his employe-stockholders, who were represented on his board of directors. Many an humble workman in his factories has stock certificates representing thousands of dollars, made possible by his conception of the employe-employer relationship.

He died childless. His partner, James W. Gamble, who died two years ago, also left no male heirs to carry on the business their grandfathers had founded.

Procter dipped far into his pockets to contribute to charities. Sundry gifts brought to $5,000,000 in all the amount he gave to just one hospital here.

Blind Girl to Become Doctor of Philosophy

New York, May 2 (AP).—Blind since the age of 11, Miss Eleanor Gertrude Brown, of Dayton, Ohio, will receive the degree of doctor of philosophy from Columbia University in June.

In announcing this today, university officials said they believed no blind woman had ever been given such a high scholastic award.

Court to Air Killing of Monkey For Biting Dog at Ocean View

Ocean View, Va., May 2 (Spl.). A monkey bites a dog and the monkey is killed. That is news here.

George C. Shackleford, who became more or less well known because of his trial on a charge of hijacking a police patrol wagon loaded with bootleg liquor just before Christmas, had a pet monkey.

The monkey got loose Monday and made advances to a dog owned by Fred W. Vail. The dog was bitten, the monkey clinging to his back. Vail, perceiving his pup was unhappy, obtained an axe or a chisel or some improvised weapon (the accounts differ on this point), and took a healthy slice at the monkey, it is claimed.

The monkey died as a result of the wound.

Vail swore out a warrant for the arrest of Shackleford on charges of allowing a vicious monkey to run at large and with threatening anyone who harmed the monkey. The case was continued in police court yesterday until Friday.

Early today Vail was arrested on complaint of Gertrude E. Green, secretary of the local branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, charging that Vail did "maim, disable and kill a monkey in violation of the statute made and provided for such cases."

Jefferson's Share of U. S. Funds Is Estimated at $90,000.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 2 (Spl.). Approximately $34,000 will come into Berkeley County as result of the corn-hog reduction program, County Agent W. N. McClung estimates, as tabulation of the applications came to a finish here today.

Jefferson County's share of the corn-hog program money will be very much larger. It is estimated on imcomplete tabulations that about $90,000 will be handed the Jefferson farmers who joined the program. Morgan County's share is estimated at $2,500.

In Jefferson County approximately 355 farms have been signed up by their owners and operators, estimated at about 60 per cent of the total farm acreage of Jefferson. One or two Jefferson farmers will receive around $1,200. Several will receive around $900, it is estimated.

The total average number of hogs raised on these 167 farms during the base period was 14,129. The total corn yield on the 167 farms for 1933 was 155,005 bushels. Berkeley County's average corn yield per acre during the base period 1932-33 was 34.46 bushels per acre.

Street Car Lines 'Drug on Market'

Charleston, W. Va., May 2 (Spl.). Early passing of the street car and the interurban trolley lines in West Virginia was forecast today by counsel for utility concerns in asking lower tax assessments at the annual hearing by the State board of public works.

Traction system representatives backed up a statement by Wright Hugus, of Wheeling, representing the Wheeling Public Service Co., that "you couldn't sell a street car line today for love or money."

James A. Meredith, of Fairmont, general counsel for the Monongahela West Penn system, declared that the street car is rapidly moving out of the transportation picture.

Union Organizer Sent to Danville

Another Effort to Sign Up Textile Workers Due.

Danville, Va., May 2 (Spl.).—An organizer for the United Textile Workers of America will arrive here this week and another serious effort will be made to organize operatives of the second largest textile mill in the United States.

First word of the proposal to follow up policies enunciated during recent weeks at labor meetings in Philadelphia and in Greenville, S. C., was received here today, when it was learned that Joseph Steiner has been assigned the Danville field. This city was chosen because of the size of the mills and because of an effort to unionize in 1929 and 1930, when a prolonged strike took place.

Mrs. Roxie Dodson, president of the local labor union, confirmed the reports and announced that a mass meeting will be held Saturday night.

Auto Tag Receipts Drop 23 Per Cent

Virginia Loss Will Run Well Over Million.

Richmond, May 2 (Spl.).—Motor vehicle license tax receipts are $1,011,908.39, or 23 per cent behind collections for the corresponding period of last year, John Q. Rhodes, director of the Division of Motor Vehicles reported today. The 23 per cent shortage is due directly to the license tax cut decreed by the Assembly and is just a bit more than half the estimated percentage of loss due to the cut. Mr. Rhodes believes the actual loss due to the cut will be nearer $1,000,000 than the $1,800,000 expected.

He reported an increase of 35,929 in the number of passenger cars licensed compared to last year. The total thus far is 224,452, a gain of 19 per cent.

VERA to Furnish 3,000,000 Plants

Sweet Potato Seedlings Will Be Bought.

Richmond, May 2 (Spl.).—Purchase of approximately 3,000,000 sweet potato plants in late May or early June for distribution to relief and marginal relief families having subsistence gardens in 47 counties of the State, has been announced by L. B. Deitrick, State garden director for the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration.

These plants will be purchased locally wherever possible, Mr. Deitrick said, and the allotment per subsistence garden will be about 200 plants.

Mr. Deitrick said that the late spring and cold weather has delayed the starting of the subsistence gardens in several sections, but many of the 27,000 relief and marginal relief families receiving seed and fertilizer have started their gardens.

Virginia Faces Extra Session Of Lawmakers

Relief Issue Regarded as Likely to Result in Summer Call.

Richmond, May 2 (Spl.).—Virginia lawmakers may be called in extra session this summer, if reports received here can be taken as an indication of the sentiment of the members of the General Assembly. Senator John A. Lesner, Norfolk, has been quoted as saying an extra session would clear up many matters, especially those pertaining to State appropriations to meet Federal relief appropriations. Gov. Peery is opposed to calling an extra session if it can be avoided, although he realizes the necessity of legislation to cover many matters that were apparently neglected at the last session.

Daniel Coleman and Ralph H. Daughton, members of the lower house from Norfolk, also think an extra session would provide legislation to meet a stringent financial situation and provide the ABC board with needed funds. Among the matters to be considered at an extra session if it is called will be:

1. Necessity of making direct appropriations to meet Federal Emergency Relief allotments.

2. Amendments to the State liquor control law as a result of the experience of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in getting the system in operation, and provision for funds to enforce the law against bootleggers.

3. The prospective deficit at the end of the current biennium on June 30, which foreshadows a larger excess of expenditures over revenue for the succeeding two years.

4. Inadequate funds for an eight-month public school term in all of the counties of the State.

5. Increased taxes or submission of a bond issue to a vote of the people in November for relief and school purposes, as well as more direct authority for borrowing money for highway purposes.

6. Reduction of State expenditures for ordinary purposes.

Heflin, Third In Race, Plans To Probe Vote

3,000 Behind in Alabama Primary; Graves Leads Gubernatorial Fight.

Birmingham, Ala., May 2 (AP).—Former Senator J. Thomas Heflin, running third in a field of three seeking the Fifth District Congressional seat, tonight said he would "investigate" the primary and predicted he would be in the run-off with the leader, Representative Miles B. Allgood.

With 172 out of 246 boxes in the district reported from yesterday's Democratic primary, Heflin was more than 3,000 votes behind Allgood, and nearly 2,000 behind Maj. Joe Starnes.

Heflin said he received fewer votes in the count than he should have.

In 1930, Heflin, running as an independent after he had been barred from the Democratic primary because he did not support Alfred E. Smith in 1928, was defeated for the Senate by John Bankhead. He contested the election before the Senate, but lost.

Graves Leading.

Former Gov. Bibb Graves, bucking a precedent of more than 30 years in which no chief executive has been returned to the office, piled up more than 100,000 votes with more than 300 of the State's 2,186 ballot boxes missing to lead the ticket. He will be opposed in the run-off by Maj. Frank Dixon, whose surprising strength placed him well ahead of Judge Leon McCord, of Montgomery, picked by most veteran politicians as certain to enter the second primary. The vote on 1,846 boxes gave Graves 102,654; Dixon 77,434, and McCord 60,836.

In addition to Allgood, another Representative, Lamar Jeffers, for 14 years Representative from the Fourth District, failed to show decisive strength and trailed Judge Samuel F. Hobbs, of Selma.

Representative Oliver Wins.

The tabulations of 207 out of 230 boxes in the district gave Hobbs 13,327 and Jeffers 12,607.

The vote in the Fifth District, which former Senator Heflin challenged as "ridiculous" and claimed a margin of 1,500 votes over Starnes in one county alone, with 172 out of 246 boxes, gave Allgood 11,104, Starnes 9,379 and Heflin 7,538.

By a comfortable margin, Representative W. B. Oliver won over Pete B. Jarman, jr., the first opposition offered since 20 years ago when he was elected first from the Sixth Congressional District.

Representative A. H. Carmichael, the Alabama youngster in point of service, won handily from Judge J. Fred Johnson, jr., of Florence.

Virginia Licensees Rap Wine Mark-Up

New Association Protests, Says 'Leggers Aided.

Richmond, May 2 (Spl.).—Formal protest against the new wine 20 per cent mark-up plan announced by the Alcoholic Beverage Control board was filed yesterday by the Virginia ABC Licensees Association which was organized here last week.

The association takes the view that the mark-up is so high that legitimate dealers will not be able to make a proper profit and that the illicit handler of wines will be given a big advantage.

The group today sent out letters to licensees in all parts of Virginia, inviting them to join the Association whose chief objective is to dignify the handling of wines and beer with a view to promoting temperance. The association has the unofficial approval of the ABC board. The movement, which was only started here within the past few weeks, has gained considerable headway.

PWA officials agreed to pay one-third of the cost of labor and material on the project. Mr. Wilson also said the Government officials suggested that the bonds, of which there is an authorized issue of $235,000, be advertised for sale, instead of selling them direct to the Government.

Thomas Balked In Showdown On Sitner Bill

Vote Put Off on Rider to Glass Bill; Roosevelt Meeting Called.

look for silver legislation yesterday became greatly confused.

The highly controversial silver debate burst on a Senate scene as peaceful as any in recent weeks. With few members present, the Senate was debating the corporate bankruptcy bill when Senator Robinson moved to lay that measure aside temporarily and take up the Glass bill authorizing the Federal reserve banks to lend up to $280,000,000 to industry.

Quick Vote Sought.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, made a brief explanation of that measure. Suddenly it appeared the Administration leaders were making an effort to speed a final vote on the bill. Democratic Senators were quietly asked to withdraw proposed amendments and help the rush to a final vote.

It then became apparent that an effort was being made to have the bill passed before it could be used as a vehicle to carry a silver rider. But word of this reached Senator Thomas in another part of the Capitol and, obtaining his amendment, he rushed to the Senate chamber.

As he breathlessly dashed into the chamber, waving his proposed amendment in the air, the presiding officer was just on the verge of putting the bill to a final vote. After his amendment was read, Thomas referred to the speed with which the Glass bill unexpectedly was being rushed through, but he said he had no complaint to make.

Incidentally, if the Thomas proposal is attached to the Glass bill, it would be ironical, because in the Senate there is no more ardent opponent of currency inflation and easy money schemes than Senator Glass. Thomas explained he selected the Glass bill as a vehicle for his proposal because it, like his plan, would amend the Federal Reserve act.

Differs from Dies Bill.

Thomas' new plan differs substantially in several respects from the amended Dies bill reported several weeks ago by the Senate Agricultural Committee. This bill made mandatory the purchase of 50,000,000 ounces of silver monthly until the metal sold for $1.29 an ounce or the price level was restored to the 1926 average.

Not mentioned in the amended Dies bill was the first section of the Thomas proposal, which provided:

"It is hereby declaerd to be the policy of the United States to use both gold and silver as standard money and as the basis for the issuance of currency and as reserves in the Federal Reserve banks and in the Treasury of the United States on a ratio of 70 per cent in gold and 30 per cent in silver."

The amendment proceeded to recite the provisions of the Dies bill authorizing and directing the Export-Import Bank, established under the RFC, to negotiate with foreign buyers for the sale of agricultural surpluses and manufactured commodities to be paid for in silver coin or bullion, which should be accepted at a price not less than 10 per cent nor more than 25 per cent in excess of the world price for the metal. The Dies bill, however, provided only for sale of farm products.

Would Issue Certificates.

The silver thus taken in exchange for American goods would be turned over to the Secretary of the Treasury in exchange for silver certificates.

The Thomas proposal also provided for the nationalization of all silver in the country, the Secretary of the Treasury being "authorized and directed to take title to all monetary silver bullion domiciled within the United States and its possessions" and to pay for this metal "a fair price not less than the highest world price for spot fine silver on the day preceding issuance of the proclamation" of nationalization, but in no event in excess of 50 cents an ounce.

In addition to this acquisition of silver, the Secretary of the Treasury would be authorized—but not "directed"—to purchase, starting after January 1 next, silver bullion wherever it shall be procurable at a price to be fixed by him from time to time. He would pay for this silver with silver certificates.

The amendment provided that "the receipt and purchase of silver under this act shall continue until the general domestic price level as measured by the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics shall equal the price level of 1928, or until the United States shall have secured and added silver to our monetary reserves to the extent of 30 per cent of such total metallic reserves as measured by intrinsic or standard dollar value, whereupon in either instance the acquisition and purchase of silver under this act shall be suspended."

However, if the price lever subsequently should fall three points or if the silver reserves should be reduced to less than 30 per cent of the total metallic reserve, silver purchases and acquisitions shall be resumed "in such amounts monthly as may be necessary to the end" the 1926 general price level shall be maintained as well as the 30 per cent metallic reserve in silver.

Thomas Deaf to Pleas.

Administration leaders undertook to persuade Thomas his proposal was not germane to the pending bill and should be sent to the Banking and Currency Committee. He refused to agree to this contention and said he wanted a vote on his plan, although he was willing to defer a vote until further conferences designed to seek a compromise could be held.

He said it was imperative Congress should take further action on the money question, pointing out that prices were falling. American wheat, he said, was selling for less in England than a year ago. Despite steps taken to cheapen the dollar, it retained a purchasing power of 136 cents as compared with 167 cents a year ago.

With people unable to pay their taxes, he continued, it had become necessary for Congress to pass the municipal bankruptcy bill, which he said he feared would be the "first step to a Nation-wide repudiation of debts." He contended that with the banks investing all their money in Government securities the country was approaching a "bond inflation" and "a bond crash."

Administration leaders finally decided to adjourn until today. Unless the silverites have had their White House conference and are ready to go on, it is the intention of Senator Robinson to lay aside the Glass bill with its silver rider and finish consideration of the corporate bankruptcy bill.

Aid to Kansas Miners Urged

Missouri Cuts Guard on Border; McGugin Asks Action.

Lamar, Wyo., May 2 (AP).—A reduction in the force of National guardsmen patroling the Missouri border near here against a threatened march of idle southeastern Kansas deep-shaft coal miners on operating strip mines was ordered late today by Adjt. Gen. Harold W. Brown.

Quiet prevailed and strip pit shovels continued at work without interference in Kansas and Missouri, while operators and union representatives met in an effort to settle their controversy.

Meanwhile, Representative Harold McGugin (Republican), of Kansas, urged Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, to seek an immediate adjustment of the dispute so 2,200 destitute miners in the Pittsburgh, Kans., area may return to work.

McGugin also appealed to Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins, submitting a report that 7,000 miners in Crawford County, Kans., alone, are unemployed, and stating "more distress and, I fear, more violence, is in store unless immediate attention can be given to this county."

Weirton Denies Rum Ruled Vot

Hits Charge Two Women "Passed Out" at Party Before Election.

Wilmington, Del., May 2 (AP).—A preelection party attended by women employes of the Weirton Steel Co. was organized by the women themselves and their employers bore no part of the expense, company counsel declared today in United States District Court.

The statement was made as part of a sweeping denial of Federal Government charges that the company offered "special inducements" to influence employes to vote for collective bargaining representatives who were favorable to the management.

Earl F. Reed, Weirton counsel, offered affidavits purporting to show that Government claims that two wome nat the party "passed out" from the effects of liquor were false. Reed contended, on the basis of affidavits he presented, that nothing stronger than "soda and beer" was consumed.

It was the third day of argument in the Government's suit for an injunction to prevent the Weirton company from interfering with the election of its workers, with the defendant indicating preparedness to challenge the constitutionality of the recovery act and the steel industry code as it affects relationship between employer and employe.

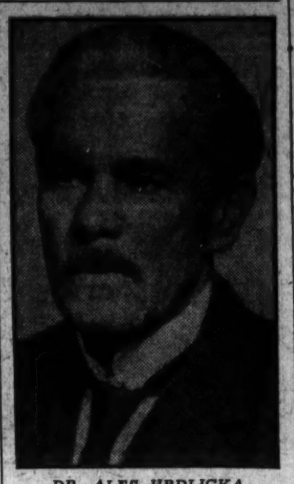
Dr. Hrdlicka Soon Will Resume Research Work on Kodiak Isle

Scientist to Hunt for New Facts About Earliest Americans.



DR. ALES HRDLICKA.

Where cannibals' fires 15 centuries ago lit up a lonely corner of a subarctic island, a little village which wrote its history in the kitchen refuse of those centuries will be the summer home of one of Washington's most distinguished men.

It will be vacation time but that only for Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, famous Smithsonian anthropologist, who, on May 14 will turn his face northward to Kodiak Island and that ancient village site, one of the oldest places of human occupation in the Americas.

Hard work can't be called vacation, even in Alaska, and no miner grubbing gold along the Circle will swing a pick harder than white-haired Dr. Hrdlicka, whose treasures will be more facts about the earliest Americans and another step toward his great quest, knowledge of how the Asiatics "discovered" America.

Work to Be Hard.

In his office in the National Museum, an office which is a veritable Golgotha of human bones, Dr. Hrdlicka talked with the enthusiasm of one starting on a search for the Golden Fleece, yet at the same time dispelling any belief that a scientific expedition such as this was a holiday.

The keynote of the job is dig, dig, dig, the scientist said. Hard manual work, to the tune of fighting vicious biting gnats that make it necessary to cover hands and face all during the day with gloves and netting and often in cold, hard and frequent rain, is excavation at Kodiak.

But there is compensation, though it not be of precious metal. Spirits may be low, Dr. Hrdlicka says, when the day grows old and no important find has been made, but at those times a thrill runs through the workers as one uncovers a skull, a carved bit of ivory or a stone implement.

Such will be the life of the three or five young students who will pay their own way to be a part of Dr. Hrdlicka's delving into the past. And they will join him in the backbending toil of the digging. Among them will be a young sophomore from the University of Maryland, C. T. R. Bohannan, of Kensington, Md.

Hit by Economy.

Going back to this little village site will be for Dr. Hrdlicka a return to a love which he was forced to abandon last year. He worked at the village in 1931 and 1932 but last year the economy program stopped further digging. He is restive to be back because the snow and ice of another winter would have ruined part of two years' work.

Of Kodiak Island as a source of details about some of the erliest inhabitants of America, Dr. Hrdlicka says it must have been one of the largest centers of the native population of Alaska. There is definite evidence of two distinct populations of the island, he says.

Of these, he said an earlier type were cannibals. This first population vanished in an unknown manner. It may have been through epidemics, or wholesale massacres or emigration, or all these combined. Perhaps the solution to this mystery will be one thing the expedition will have learned when it returns in September.

Tokyo Leaders Decry Feeling Over Hull Note

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Tokyo (Thursday), May 3 (U.P.).—Heads of leading national societies declared today they have no fear of any extensive anti-American sentiment developing, "for the tim being," as result of the United States Government's declaration in opposition to a "Japanese Monroe Doctrine."

Mitsura Toyama, extreme Nationalist leader for half a century and close friend of Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, was reported to have sent word to all his associates that no useful purpose would be served by expressions of indignation with regard to the American attitude at this time.

Toyama, who once hacked off two fingers and gave them to a moneylended as security for money, he used to start a Nationalist newspaper, was said to feel that Secretary Hull's declaration was an impartial expression of a general theory; it should not be taken to mean the United States intends actively to oppose Japanese aspirations for realistic action to preserve peace in eastern Asia.

A spokesman for the "Shiunso" (Purple Cloud Society), powerful Nationalist organization, called attention to the society's last announcement, which made these points:

1. The United States is not likely to continue, indefinitely, to uphold the so-called Stimson doctrine of nonrecognition of the independent state of Manchukuo. Rapid and healthy development of Manchukuo with Japan's aid is having a healthy effect on American opinion.

2. American opinion appears reconciled to Japan's determination to maintain her mandate over the Marshalls and Carolines, former German islands in the south Pacific Ocean.

3. Regarding the Japanese exclusion clause in the United States immigration law, Japan must await calmly until the American people decide to "right this wrong" of their own accord.

4. Japan must pledge herself to respect independence of the Philippines.

5. Japan and the United States should solidify their trade relations by agreeing to complete reciprocity—each nation exporting to the other the same amount imported.

Hagerstown Faces Sewer Patent Suit

Outcome of Milwaukee's High Court Plea Waited.

Hagerstown, Md., May 2 (Spl.).—The mayor and city council have been informed that the city of Milwaukee has appealed to the United States Supreme Court in the suit brought against that city by Activated Sludge, Inc., which claims patents on its process have been infringed by Milwaukee. Hagerstown, which uses the same system for sewage disposal, faces a similar suit.

The United States District Court last year held that the patents of the company had been infringed by Milwaukee, that the patents were valid, and the Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the decision. The appeal filed by Milwaukee prevents Activated Sludge, Inc., from proceeding to collect damages and royalties pending the outcome of the appeal.

Hagerstown has been awaiting the outcome of the Milwaukee case before dealing with the company, representatives of which have conferred with local officials.

Construction Jumps Nine-Fold.

Hagerstown, Md., May 2 (Spl.).—Building in Hagerstown during April increased nine-fold over the corresponding month in 1933, a report by the city clerk today showed.

Experts Split Over Pulitzer Prize Awards

New York, May 2 (AP).—A storm of debate broke in Broadway theatrical circles today over published reports that the drama jury had recommended "Mary of Scotland" as the 1933 Pulitzer Prize play, but that the advisory board of the Columbia University School of Journalism disagreed and chose "Men in White."

At Columbia University it was pointed out tonight that the awards would not be made public until the trustees appropriate the funds next Monday for the monetary prizes which accompany the Pulitzer awards.

Caroline Miller's "Lamb in His Bosom" was reported by The New York Post and The World-Telegram to have been selected by the advisory board as the best novel by an American after the jury on letters had recommended another book.

The World-Telegram quoted a statement from the university, as follows:

"Secretary Frank D. Fachenthaler wishes to make it known, at the request of the drama jury, composed of Dr. Walter Prichard Eaton, Mr. Clayton Hamilton and Mr. Austin Strong, that it always has been understood they were retained in an advisory capacity only and they do not question the right of the advisory board of the school of journalism to exercise its own judgment in making the award.

"But in justice to themselves, the three jurors desired the public to know that, in their report to the committee, they voted unanimously for 'Mary of Scotland,' by Maxwell Anderson."

Hamilton was quoted by both papers as calling the board's action "outrageous."

"I have learned," he was quoted, "that the committee frequently has overruled the juries in the past and has overruled them in nearly every field this year, especially as to the prize novel. I don't know what to do about."

"Lamb in His Bosom" is the first published novel by Mrs. Miller, wife of the school superintendent at Baxley, Ga.

"Men in White" is by Sidney Kingsley, a 27 year-old actor.

Testimony in Canada Is Called "Fairy Tale" by Experts.

Chicago, May 2 (AP).—The story that Lincoln's assassination was engineered by "international bankers" as told to a Canadian parliamentary committee yesterday, was branded today by Lincoln experts a "fairy tale, entirely without basis in fact."

It was Gerald G. Mogeer, of Vancouver, B. C., testifying before a banking committee hearing, who brought the bankers into John Wilkes Booth's plot. They wanted Lincoln out of the way so they could, he said, control the world's currency.

Otto Eisenschiml, of Chicago, who has specialized in the details of the plot and the trial of the conspirators, said the story was one of numerous baseless fantasies that went around the country in the decades after Lincoln.

Harper Leech, Daily News editorial writer and an authority on the Nation's financial history, pointed out that the bankers were not opposed to Lincoln's monetary policies, and that Lincoln signed the National banking act of 1863, approved by bankers.

"It's another of those tales that have been going around the prairies and the backwoods for 60 years," Leech added. "McGeer probably heard it from his grandfather."

Lloyd Lewis, author of "Myths After Lincoln" and an authority on the Civil War period, said he could not recognize what McGeer was talking about.

In New York, Ida Tarbell, Lincoln biographer, called McGeer's story "just loose talk" and said Booth shot Lincoln because he regarded the President as destroyer of his beloved South.

At Springfield, Ill., Lincoln's home town, Paul M. Angle, State librarian and secretary of the Illinois Historical Association, said there was "no foundation" for McGreer's story.

Ransom Ready; Captors Waited

June Robles, 6, Still Is Missing; Family Hopeful.

Tucson, Ariz., May 2 (AP).—June Robles, 6, kidnaped a week ago today, still is missing.

The ransom demanded—$15,000 in notes of small denomination—is ready and relatives awaited hoped for acceptance by her abductors of their offer to pay for the child's safe return.

Bernabe Robles, white-haired grandfather of June; Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Robles, her parents, and others of the intimate family circle grimly kept their own counsel in furtherance of their promise of secrecy to the kidnapers.

No inkling as to whether a reply had been received to the family's appeal and ransom offer, made two days ago, was allowed to escape.

Information from reliable sources was that June's relatives were convinced she is not dead.

Reports persisted that little June's captors were holding her somewhere in Sonora, although Bernabe Robles returned from there Monday without news of his dark-eyed little granddaughter. He enlisted the aid of friends and relatives in the little towns and rancheros below the border.

Son, Shot, Brings Father to Court

Parent Released Pending Grand Jury Action.

A father, charged with assaulting his 24-year-old son, was held for grand jury action by Judge Ralph Given in Police Court yesterday.

Clarence Curran, 49, was brought to court by his son, William. The latter charged he was shot during an altercation with the elder Curran last week.

After a preliminary hearing, Judge Given took Curran's personal bond to appear before the grand jury. The son, police said, was not seriously injured.

Michigan Students Protest May Day 'Beating' in Detroit

Police Deny Claim of Rough Treatment in Dispersing Groups.

Detroit, May 2 (AP).—Thirty-eight University of Michigan students who said they sought scientific data on the extent to which violence is used to "suppress minorities" protested today against the treatment accorded them by police as participants in a May Day labor demonstration in downtown Detroit.

Back in Ann Arbor, they said they would carry their complaints to Mayor Frank Couzens, of Detroit, charging that two of their number were struck with blackjacks and a young woman forced to jump from their banner - decorated truck, spraining her ankle.

In Detroit Police Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert said he planned no investigation unless a well-founded complaint is received. He added that after questioning his men, "I believe reports of beatings and obscene language are exaggerated."

University officials professed little interest in the incident. President Alexander G. Ruthven said that the Communist group at the "when university students create a university is "very small," and that disturbance they must take the consequences."

Creating a disturbance is just what Detroit police claim the student crowd did, circling Grand Circus Park, where May Day demonstrations had been prohibited, singing the "International" and shouting to bystanders.

Two hundred policemen were stationed in and near the park and the truck load of students was quickly surrounded by motorcycle patrolman, who started with it, ostensibly for the city limits. But, the students claim, they were taken to a dead-end street instead, forced to alight and blackjacks wielded on two of them.

$3,037,526 Waits, Waits and Waits Bank Depositors

If anyone can tell the Comptroller of the Currency how to persuade people to come get the dividends being paid by bank receivers, he would appreciate it.

Believe it or not, that is one of the things now worrying J. F. T. O'Connor. As he left the White House yesterday he disclosed that—

Reports from receivers of 848 banks showed they held, and have been holding for 60 days, uncalled-for checks amounting to $3,037,526.

On the basis of this, his office computed that $4,058,875 is the total amount of 60-day-old dividends now awaiting depositors of closed National banks.

A Period Of Tranquillity?

Administration assurances that "crack-down" policies are at least temporarily out of the picture are politically as well as economically desirable. Uneasiness over the failure of much New Deal legislation to achieve anticipated results has been spreading in recent weeks. No matter how great the President's personal popularity his party can not afford to enter the fall campaign confronted with a reasonable belief that it is hampering rather than advancing recovery.

Such belief may be diminished by the authoritative intimations that a period of tranquillity is ahead, and that the "policy of pulverization" and less drastic restraints on business are to be eased in the interests of individual initiative. Even convinced supporters of the multiform, and sometimes contradictory, aspects of the recovery program have lately been admitting that there is less need of making new advances than of consolidating those which have been attempted. The months prior to the Congressional elections are the obvious period in which to work for such consolidation.

Aside from the politics involved, however, it is clear that the Administration needs a breathing spell to concentrate on the new problems aroused by past experimentation. The fruits of a careless monetary program are apparent in the present drive for currency inflation of one form or another. Encouragement to a high-wage program, based on anticipation of rising prices, is bringing its train of industrial troubles now that the price-level shows a downward tendency. These and other difficulties caused by a too casual attitude in the past are now becoming all too apparent. Caution in creating new problems will not save the Administration from the difficult task of confronting those which have been steadily growing in recent months.

The New Austria.

Permanent adjournment of the Austrian Parliament is the logical sequence to what has transpired in that country during the past year. Democracy went into coma when Dollfuss let loose his reign of terror.

Under the new constitution, which the puppet Parliament adopted before it expired, Austria becomes a corporative state, patterned after the Italian Fascist model. The government reserves to its own jurisdiction certain matters, such as radio, tourist propaganda, administration of the corporative system in the learned professions, arts and public services, and a few more. Others are to be administered by councils composed of representatives of the corporations. The councils are to constitute a federal assembly which has certain limited powers, alterable by the President and the Chancellor.

The net effect of the constitution is to confirm and perpetuate a dictatorship—that, and nothing less. The new organic law professes to continue the guarantee of personal freedom, but ironically provides for its abolition. Moreover, the constitution says specifically that "every citizen has a right to express his opinion by word of mouth, writing, picture or any other manner within the limits fixed by law." Unfortunately, that is no good to those who have seen how narrow are those limits.

There is no blinking the fact that Austria has been projected into a dictatorship, as stringent as any in the world and based upon intimidation. Here was a good-natured, lackadaisical, highly-civilized people who loved nothing so much as personal freedom. They have lost it and all the appurtenances of liberty for which men fight, because they were not vigilant in guarding it.

Those Charming Police.

The New York City police showed on Tuesday they have learned, after several unfortunate occurrences in the past, that the best way to handle radical demonstrations is to remember the first duty of a policeman is preservation of law and order. As the Herald Tribune so well expressed it, the 9,000 patrolmen assigned to the Communist and Socialist parades on May Day were "tactful almost to the point of charm."

Although thousands of members of these two political parties, who have been at loggerheads and who have already spilled each other's blood, might well have clashed with each other and with the police, there was no trouble in the day-long demonstrations in and around Union Square. The radicals on parade were protected by the police, and the bystanders, who gathered in huge numbers to watch, were not molested.

Too often previously policemen in New York and other cities have seized upon radical demonstrations as excuses for exercising their nightsticks promiscuously. More than one parade has been dispersed on the flimsiest of excuses and pitched battles between radicals and the police have more often than not been started by the aggressive attitude of the latter.

The excellent handling of the 60,000 Communist and the 40,000 Socialist adherents by those charming policemen should be regarded as a lesson in tactics by law enforcement officers throughout the country. It's pretty hard to call a policeman a Cossack when his manners are above reproach and he stops traffic to allow 100,000 citizens to listen to, and join in, condemnations of the present social order.

Municipal Bankruptcy.

Passage of the municipal bankruptcy bill by the Senate on Tuesday came as a surprise. The issue was raised in Congress more than a year ago. A bill designed to permit a majority of creditors to reach a compromise with a municipality and enforce that settlement upon minority creditors through the Federal courts was adopted in the House last June. Apparently it was neglected in the Senate at that time because leaders hoped that improvement in the general economic situation would relieve the difficulties of bankrupt cities.

The need for some action to aid cities in acute financial distress is unquestioned. But the method proposed—indeed every method that has yet been devised—is extremely complicated. It involves the sanctity of contracts and States rights. From many sources its constitutionality has been challenged. By suddenly passing the bill in spite of these impediments the Senate probably felt that the end justifies the means.

More than 1,200 American cities and other political subdivisions have defaulted on bonds amounting to an aggregate of over $1,500,000,000. Some of these municipalities are just as bankrupt as individuals who find it impossible to pay their debts. They are the victims of extravagant spending, unbalanced budgets, tax delinquencies and in some instances bank failures. It is more than passing strange that an Administration which is fully cognizant of this situation should have urged municipalities further to increase their indebtedness to finance public works. That, however, is a different issue.

State legislation is not sufficient to relieve bankrupt cities because the Constitution forbids the States to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts. Even the powers of Congress in this field are not unlimited. The Department of Justice concluded that Congress might enact a law to permit "insolvent municipal corporations to effect a composition of their debts through the medium of a Federal bankruptcy court, provided the law does not allow the court to interfere with their governmental functions and provided State law authorizes the municipal corporation to take such action." Nevertheless, some students of the question, including the committee on bankruptcy of the United States Chamber of Commerce, fear that legislation of this character would "break down the division of powers between the Federal Government and the States," thus jeopardizing local self-government.

In reply to these apprehensions it is argued that the legislation is of an emergency character. Its benefits would be available only to municipalities now insolvent and those which may become insolvent during the next two years. The Senate bill provides that any group holding 5 per cent or more of a city's obligations may demand a court hearing. Agreement by three-fourths of the creditors would be essential to give effect to any compromise plan for scaling down interest or principal. Because of the obvious necessity of relieving distressed cities, and the inability of the States to act alone, legislation of this sort may now be enacted although theoretically unsound and distasteful in principle.

Dodging The Issue.

Arguments advanced on Capitol Hill in favor of the stock exchange control bill are not dissipating a healthy skepticism concerning certain of its provisions. Chairman Rayburn, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, has devoted much energy to a denunciation of "Wall street lobbyists." In a similar effort to discredit opponents of this drastic measure the Senate Banking and Currency Committee has published data indicating that exorbitant profits were made by members of the New York Stock Exchange from January 1, 1928, to August 31, 1933. It is unfortunate that proponents of the bill should thus sidestep the real issue.

Of course, Wall street is fighting regulation. But opposition from this source must be distinguished from the legitimate apprehensions of business men throughout the country. Mr. Rayburn seeks to brush aside all opposition by insinuating that it springs from a "vicious lobby"—that it is self-seeking propaganda. Yet he must be aware of the fact that the most cogent criticism of this measure has come from people whose fear is that it would delay recovery by its industrial control features.

Perhaps the most interesting revelation in the data gathered by Ferdinand Pecora is the net deficits of New York Stock Exchange member firms in 1931 and 1932. The public was already aware of the fact that speculators made enormous profits in 1928 and 1929. And nearly every one is agreed that conditions which made unbridled speculation possible ought to be corrected. There is no real controversy over the elimination of actual abuses through Federal regulation of the securities markets.

But one section of the stock exchange bill would place all corporate business under rigid bureaucratic domination. Many commercial organizations on which people are dependent for employment are already bogged down by the restrictive provisions of the securities act. Under the stock market bill the regimentation of industry could be carried further. Normal restoration of business activity might be indefinitely delayed if this measure should become law in its present form.

It is, therefore, an evasion of the issue to suppose that every one who is opposed to fettering business in this critical period is a propagandist inspired by Wall street. The persistent effort of Mr. Rayburn and his colleagues to drive this bill through by indiscriminately casting reproach upon its opponents will only strengthen the suspicion that its underlying purpose has not been explained to the public.

Extravagant Relief.

Investigation of emergency relief in the District centers attention upon the enormous sums that are being spent throughout the country for this purpose. Federal as well as local officials are properly concerned over the large expenditures for relief here. The mere fact that a million dollars per month, in round figures, is being poured into charitable activities in a city the size of Washington calls for searching inquiry. Similar investigations in many other cities might result in substantial savings for taxpayers.

When charity was essentially local in character the vast majority of families in need preferred to take their names off the relief rolls at the earliest possible opportunity. But the attitude of the average family in taking relief funds from the Federal Government is quite different. There are indications that a considerable number of those now on relief rolls prefer this meager subsistence to work. A few days ago it was reported that the local Emergency Works Administration was in need of 4,000 men to carry on local projects, in spite of the heavy demands for relief.

It is reported, also, that an unusually large number of transients are obtaining aid in Washington. Doubtless many of them have come here expecting to find jobs. Some may have been lured to the Capital by reports of liberal relief allowances. District taxpayers ought not to bear the cost of supporting this army of transients which, according to Engineer Commissioner Gotwals, accounts for one-third of the local relief appeals.

For the country as a whole relief demands present a challenging problem. The Federal Emergency Relief Administration is not yet a year old. Yet it has spent $1,400,000,000. It is the largest spending agency in the Government. Only last February 15 Congress replenished the FERA fund by an appropriation of $950,000,000. Only $450,000,000 of that sum remains unspent. States continue to withdraw from the field of relief, thus throwing a greater burden upon the Federal Government. Unless some means of curbing these extensive doles is found, Congress will find it necessary to appropriate additional billions.

Loose and extravagant policies have been encouraged by the fact that this money is coming from the Federal Treasury and is being spent, for the most part, by local agencies. The FERA found it necessary to abolish the CWA because of the graft and extravagance that developed within its ranks. To what extent have similar abuses crept into that organization's direct relief activities?

Office Memorandum.

Our neighbor, Mr. Hall, whose serious mien stares at you daily from the northeast corner of the page opposite, is apparently a little ill at ease because the editorial page, as he says, "has taken to writing about books." Not only that, he evidently doesn't like editorials at all, because he says they "do little but twist and turn ingeniously around the mulberry bush."

Now, Mr. Hall is, of course, quite wrong. On the one hand, there is no reason why we should not write about books; and, on the other, we do do something beside twist and turn. We also point with pride, and sometimes we view with alarm. But that, just to please the literary editor, is beside the point. In his own phrase, we will now take a look at the bush itself, as far as it concerns writing editorials about books. We will let his animadversions about New Deal editorials pass, remembering that he recently sat up all right reading a 400-page book about technics and civilization, and is, therefore, not quite himself.

Mr. Hall, who thinks that Mencken went back on himself last Friday night, attacked the Baltimorean gentleman with fine Brounian frenzy. Hall, as a matter of fact, made out a very good case for his peculiar point of view. But it was quite obvious that the ideas which he set forth in his "editorial" were, to be charitable, somewhat bookish. That, after several sentences of turning and twisting, brings us back to books. He seems to think that only book reviewers should be initiates of the art of reading.

We read books so we can keep one jump ahead of the reviewer. We write about them because we have often found that books contain ideas, and ideas are the essence of all editorials. Now are you satisfied? But we keep them in the required space, Mr. Hall, and don't fill two-thirds of a column and call it an editorial.

By the way, let's go out and have a drink, Ted. We're reading a book on which we want your reaction. We have another editorial page tomorrow!

Views From Virginia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding your editorial of April 21 on "Realism in Wheat"—without discussing your very ingenious explanation, and Secretary Wallace's more elaborate one, look back and tell us if you can find one single year, in which when we approach within about two months of harvest, the price of wheat did not begin to decline. The cause of it is just the same as always. Buyers are organized. Sellers are not.

I agree almost precisely with your editorial on "Down to Fundamentals," but go you one step further. I think you are mistaken in thinking your reports there mentioned are "overdramatized." People generally are beginning to realize that, no matter how good may be the motives of dreamers and visionaries, who now have charge of the conduct of the Nation, back to "fundamentals" and to common-sense we must go, or go under.

Very refreshing, in your correspondence column, is the letter of Mr. Charles Hooper, of Idaho, in which he scores a bull's eye, and hits the nail square on the head, when he announces what is practically an axiom of American life of today, "the trouble with our life is not the high cost of living, but the cost of high living."

I am impressed next with the letter of Alice Payler.

I am deliberately of opinion that organized charities ought to be abolished. I would advocate distributing the unemployed, not only to the towns, but to the rural communities, where they would soon be absorbed.

Post Scholarship Contest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I take this occasion to thank you for the inauguration of The Washington Post Scholarship Contest at Howard University? The fostering of scholarships of the kind inaugurated by The Post can not be too highly commended. I especially commend you for your interest in Howard University and the colored students. It is an incentive and encouragement to good citizenship and is greatly appreciated by the colored people of this city and country at large. I read the winning essay by Miss Ernestine Greene, of Cardozo High School, on "Fascism, Communism and Democracy." It was not only well written, but informing, and showed deep research.

"The National Gallery."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since there is much discussion going on among the art connoisseurs regarding decorations to be placed in our Capital City, it has occurred to me that if the distorted physiognomies of our great statesmen Artist Robles has depicted in The Post were hung in panels in both the Senate and House of Representatives so that the future "greats" could "point with pride" to these able and brilliant political luminaries and public servants who put over the "New Deal," it would add very largely to our American history and achievements.

An Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the faculty and students of Georgetown Law School, please accept our sincere thanks for the publicity you have given in The Post to the Hamilton banquet. I realize that you are under great pressure for space at this time.

Mr. Hamilton is so prominent in many ways in the City of Washington that I feel sure the readers of The Post were all very much interested in the banquet in his honor.

"Bees by the Billion."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are hardly any honey bees left, after the hard winter, and late spring. I want to suggest that our people should take up the new idea of shipping bees by express from the South. It has now reached the practical stage, and the express rates are down 50 per cent.

In some parts of the South the bees get honey every month of the year, and the shippers might do better selling live bees than selling honey. Many of the honey plants there are like the "bitter weed" which makes a honey not fit to eat, but it comes in early, and produces bees by the billion.

Also, a new idea is the larger size hive, which is 40 per cent bigger than the old style, and simpler to care for—especially suited for family use.

EDMOND FONTAINE.

Why He Reads The Post.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would seem The Post, as newly organized, is building on a solid foundation. Each writer seems to be drawing from a rich background of special knowledge and projecting this forcefully. Political and practical things are dominant, cultural subjects, literature, art, music are not submerged. Sensationalism is minimized, facts are given as facts, fancies are so designated.

The editorial page reflects the soul of a newspaper. A great editor has a large parish, and looks to the good of his people. So we are greatful to you for the wisdom and policy of your page: independent, generous in opinion, varied, virile.

All good wishes to The Post.

Dogs and Fireworks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the Be Kind to Animals Week many stirring remarks about dogs were heard over the radio. But the most essential is the care of pets, especially in the case of sensitive dogs. If our boys realized the pain they cause at every report of fireworks, especially the cap-pistol, they would not consider these toys such a delightful pastime, for that is why the dog frantically pulls at the leash and scrapes the rugs and floors, endeavoring to get into some hole, away from the pain the noise creates.

The District prohibits fireworks. That is why the wonderful display is given on the Monument Grounds on the Fourth of July for the general public, protecting the aged and sick from the all-day fireworks. Also, our lawmakers protected the dog in prohibiting the cap-pistol.

On these humane principles this statute was written for the District of Columbia. Children should be advised of the law and taught to uphold it, proving their loyalty as upright, useful citizens. I know our boys are all that.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish heartily to second a letter in your paper the other day from Theresa Russell, anent the recent "Cherry Blossom Festival."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is just a word of commendation for the Sunday walks for nature study which you are sponsoring. Mr. Robert Shosteck is doing a good piece of work in leading the groups. The walks are interesting and instructive, and the undertaking should do much good. I particularly praise the inclusion of the map of the routes to be followed. This makes it possible for those who can not go on Sundays to make the trip at another time. Here is hoping the hikes will be continued for a long time.

The Man on Horseback.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your cartoon a few days ago, of "The Man On Horseback," was good, and very much to the point. I want to compliment the artist on his very clear, and accurate conception of the case. It is a classic, and should be sent to the National Art Gallery. JOHN EMERY.

He Means Bird Dog.

I reckon I get as much enjoyment out of reading your paper as any Yankee does.

I work for a fine Yankee gentleman who takes your paper when he is here on his place shooting over the bird dogs. I train and work for him and he gives me your paper to read and sends it to me when he goes North.

I read mostly sport news as I am not much interested in politics, for, thank God, no politics disturbs me much down here in the pine woods and straw fields.

My boss gets worried up some over what he reads and that worries me, too, for he is a fine man and does not act like a Northern man. He explains to me some about what is going on and it does not seem so good.

I have not ever written a letter to a paper before but I see where a good many of your readers do so thought I would take paper and pen and write to you about what seems to me pretty funny, being raised where I was and having spent my life training bird dogs, and I mean bird dogs.

I read in your paper where at the bird dog trials at the Verbank Hunting and Shooting Club this last week a dog called Rosedale Jack won first prize because he pointed and handled a rabbit so good. That struck me as funny because down here we shoot bird dogs if they get to pointing rabbits as a regular thing and we do not give a bird dog a prize in a bird dog trial for pointing a rabbit and it would not make any difference how he handled it. I call that dog a rabbit dog and I think that trial must have been a rabbit dog trial if a dog won first prize in it for pointing a rabbit, and not a bird dog trial.

I reckon you Yankees think as different about things according to the way we think about them as you did some years ago. That don't mean so much when it just comes to a question such as what is a bird dog and a bird dog trial and what is not, but it seems to me like people in the same country ought to think pretty well alike about everything even something like this. It makes me kind of wonder if this country is getting together like it ought to by this time if people in one place think so different even in a small thing like this from what people in another place think about that same thing.

Down here in my country we do not give prizes to bird dogs in a bird dog trial for pointing rabbits. You Yankees did just that thing and you wrote about it in your paper and that is what I call funny, and I wonder maybe this country is too big and thinks too different in different places.

The Post Impressionist

That Shocking Stocking.

Postoffice, Thursday.

WE can see that we are destined to the permanent job of incinerating all the literary mistakes thrown around by this newspaper's editorial writers. That's the trouble with running a Column in the last column. The other writers just sweep into the corner anything they want to get rid of. And we're the corner.

* * *

A corner! Along about the middle of April, the man who presides over this page was in a corner himself. One of his staff had writer's cramp. Would we please help out?

We wanted to appear willing. We wrote a perfectly pontifical piece. It must have been good, because it was published. It must have been darn good, because, ever since, the chief has been after us for more. But it was disastrous, because we forged a quotation. We imagined an "ancient ditty" which inquired:

Why the stocking
Is more shocking
Than the leg?

* * *

A few days later came a letter from Richard Jarvis questioning the correctness of our "quotation." He gave a few lines of another! He said his recollection was "that this old lyric is a protest against certain now forgotten reformers" and that the lyricist is asking information as to just where their absurd process of reasoning will stop. This charlatan added that what the poet really asked was:

"Has the process any blocking?
If the clocking
In the stocking
Is more shocking
Than a 'run' . . ."

Whereupon Mr. Jarvis weakly concluded: "I have forgotten the rest." And then there rose a general clamor that we should supply it.

* * *

We tried to find friends who would help us out of our lie. We sent letters. And what did we get? Not one serious line!

"Oh, what a tangled web we weave,
When first we practice to deceive!"

* * *

Here is Juan Donovan's sworn version of the original first stanza:

Many puzzles are a job long
Take a sheet: it's frankly oblong
In the sun.
We could never get it right
Why a sheet that's loose at night
And begins to crawl and dangle
Should become a pure triangle
That cannot be squared until You've snapped
The light.

* * *

Another alleged friend, B. Unmeyer Outerbridge, demands:

Why are trunk-keys unrelated
To their locks?
Why are stockings more immodest
Than mere socks?
Please explain to us by letter
Why top strawberries are better
Than the berries
At the bottom
Of the box!

* * *

L. H. writes: "I think I suspected that the ballad was a fake; I know I admired it and its statement of a profound truth. I have asked Philip Phipps, who is likely to be up on such things. He rather inclines to think it dangerous to inquire too deeply. But he says the lines you quote bear considerable resemblance to something he recalls bits of:

Polly pondered,
While she wandered
In the lane,
Why a sweater
Gets you wetter
Than the rain . . .
Why her rooster
Never uster
Lay an egg;
Why a schooner
Empties sooner
Than a keg.

* * *

It's ironic
When a tonic
Makes you croak;
When a clever
Man can never
See a joke; . . .
When you only
Can be lonely
In a mob;
When your figure
Makes girls snigger
Till they sob;
When a Column
Is as solemn
As a pew;
(That's an error
We've no terror
Of with you!)
Or with logic
Pedagogic
Like to burst,
Or too funny
For your money—
That's the worst.

"These," L. H. concludes, "are certainly in the same manner as the ones about the stocking. Whether Rodmaster wrote both poems or not, internal evidence would seem to assign them to the same period in our culture."

* * *

And further "quotations" are still arriving! We begin to believe that there is something in the fact of our having asked help on the anniversary of the Battle of Lexington with its shot "heard 'round the world." Just here, in the last mail, comes a note from John Haig, insisting upon being told:

Why a bunny
Has a runny
Sort of nose—
Why a nudist
Feels his crudest
In his clothes.

* * *

After that, however, we think it time to lock up.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

IT must be apparent to the students of newspapers, certainly those of The Post, that a great change has come over us the past two days. The truth is that the young liberals of our staff have reached the ascendancy, that without bloodshed they have thrown the reactionaries aside.

The result was pronounced in yesterday's issue, I think. We had on the front page the story of a nude woman falling through a window onto a pile of sand and another one about Mr. Sam Insull's one pair of pajamas being direly in need of repair. It was the contention of the young liberals that we were looking at the world through somber eyes. Manifestly these two little tid-bits with their respective heads, "Not a stitch in time to save Lady Go-dive-a" and "Woman Repairs Insull's One and Only Pajamas," give us a sparkle we did not have. They give us either that—or something.

BARGERON.

What tickles me even more about the revolution than these two presentations, though, is the fact that the very day the young liberals attained the upper hand one of their number missed a corking good story, according to their lights. It was a clear-cut case of a reporter being scooped. Our Mr. Dure, who travels with the President, it was. He missed altogether the story which a rival paper had of a robin laying some eggs at the White House, or something of that sort. Now we reactionaries insist that if the young liberals want us to read stories of this type that they at least get them.

* * * *

All of this, however, is not a circumstance to what the revolution has really done. To my utter amazement I picked up the morning paper and found Mr. Ted Hall, our book reviewer, jumped clear over into the field of economics. He comes out forcibly, unequivocally, and without hesitation for "social vision" and "social planning," and, as I take it, also for "thinking." Although he did not say so I am sure he is also for "mother, home and country." There are a few more trick phrases to which I think Mr. Hall could have easily subscribed, such as "a more abundant life" and "a realm of cooperative plenty," but I suppose he didn't want to shoot all of his bolt at once.

That he is for these things, however, makes it just about unanimous. Indeed, I had not known there were any holdouts. I had not known that in all of this broad land of ours there was a single man, woman or child against "thinking," against "social vision," or against "social planning." The only question is "So what?"

* * * *

It might not be wholly amiss to point out to Mr. Hall, and to those others who have been looking admiringly into the professors' faces, that we have been having "thinking," "social vision" and "social planning" in this country for a pretty long time. There must have been some kind of thinking, of social vision, of social planning, that went into the establishment of the country itself.

And I doubt if any country in the world ever reached the degree of thinking, visioning or planning that ours did in 1929. We got to thinking too frenziedly and envisioning too high, but we were certainly doing them, and how! There was quite a bit of planning going on, too. Mr. Charles E. Mitchell, of the National City Bank, was planning to boost his wealth to one cool billion. The rest of us were not shooting so high, but we were planning bigger and better things.

The ballyhoo with which the NRA was set up made much of the need of "planning," of course, as if there had never been any before. The fact is, however, that industry and business have always been planning. They planned a plant equipment and production in 1929 to meet the consumer demand of that year, and in 1930 and subsequent years they did the same thing. The later plans called for reduction in plant operation, in production and, which hurt, in employment pay rolls. But they were planning.

Indeen, they planned and got the NRA.

Mr. Hall concludes his explosion with the statement:

"Now, I'll go back to the insulated realm of books." It is apparent that that is where he has been.

New Filipino Immigration Quota Starts

First Envoy to Islands Named to Oversee Entries.

By Kendall Foss.

Benefit No. 1 resulting from independence accrued to the Philippines yesterday when the State Department announced the appointment of a consular officer to Manila to see that Filipinos did not exceed their new quota of 50 immigrants in the United States per year.

Henry B. Day, now a vice consul in Hongkong, was named vice consul in Manila, the first American Foreign Service officer to serve in the Philippines since the Spanish-American War and probably the first such officer ever to serve in such a capacity on American soil.

In announcing the appoint the department said the immigration sections of the Tydings-McDuffie law would go into effect immediately. Citizens of the islands who are not also citizens of the United States are to be regarded as aliens. The only exception to the application of the regular immigration laws is in the case of Hawaii, where Filipinos may go without passport or visa, providing they do not seek to continue on from there into the continental United States.

Navy to Remain.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Navy Swanson said yesterday the Navy will remain in the Philippines until an agreement on withdrawal is reached with the United States. By the terms of the law, the Army is supposed to withdraw at the end of the ten-year transitional period, but the question of naval bases will be discussed again at that time.

"The Navy felt it would be better to leave the question of withdrawing its forces for later negotiations," Swanson said. "We do not want bases that take an army to defend. We need bases the Navy can defend."

Secretary of War Dern announced receipt yesterday of a message from Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy, transmitting the official text of the Philippine Legislature's joint resolution to accept the independence bill.

Except for the loophole contained in the President's message to Congress recommending enactment of the measure, the question of Philippine independence thus is finally disposed of. In his message, Roosevelt said, "Where imperfections or inequalities exist, I am confident that they can be corrected after proper hearing and in fairness to both parties."

Philippine leaders are understood to attach great importance to this sentence, believing some way will be found to avoid assuming the full burden of economic independence with its attendant removal of the present duty-free American market.

A Congressional Commission to visit the Philippines and study economic requirements on the spot is planned. Chief among problems left in an anomalous situation by the independence act are:

Sugar, coconut oil and cordage exports to the United States and imports of American goods into the Philippines.

Quotas Fixed.

Quotas somewhat under the present imports from the islands are set on the three major products, but instead of gradually diminishing the amounts allowed in duty-free during the ten-year transitional period, they are fixed once and for all.

Experts point out this removes the incentive to Filipinos to adjust their national economy gradually; it leaves them with the temptation to go right on concentrating on the production of raw materials which it will be impossible to sell when full independence comes.

On the other hand, the Philippine government is not permitted to levy any duties or place quota restrictions on American products, so there is no chance for new native industries to rise in place of the doomed ones.

These weaknesses, taken with the prohibition against entering into reciprocal trading arrangements with other countries, leave the islands poorly equipped, it is felt, for the work of adjustment ahead. Fear is entertained the islanders will drift along through the ten years of grace, unable to prepare themselves economically for complete independence, and hoping something will turn up to ease their lot before the free entry doors finally slam shut.

If this happens, close followers add, a howl will arise shortly before expiration of the transitional period. The objectors will point to the imminent danger of collapse and revolution if succor is not forthcoming and demand continuation of free entry in the name of common decency. The plea, it is feared, will prove hard to resist, so hard that it already is doubtful if the Philippines question is really settled by the acceptance of the independence act.

Melon Growers Hit Fake Claims

Boonsboro Farmers Plan Organization.

Hagerstown, Md., May 2 (Spl.).—Contending they have been hard hit by unfair trade practices, Boonsboro cantaloupe growers are planning to organize and devise means of prosecuting persons who falsely claim they are selling Boonsboro-grown cantaloupes.

For many years cantaloupes grown in a small area surrounding the town of Boonsboro have been much in demand. There is always a ready sale for them, even when the market here is glutted.

A meeting was held tonight at Boonsboro, when means of ending these unfair practices were discussed.

Cumberland Preachers Ask Liquor Shop Probe

Cumberland, Md., May 2 (Spl.).—The Cumberland Methodist Episcopal Preachers' Meeting, attended by representatives of churches in Allegany County, Md., and Piedmont, W. Va., passed resolutions yesterday urging Circuit Court judges to employ an investigator, to check on licenses issued to liquor establishments.

The resolutions recommend Sunday closing, elimination of back and side entrances reports from restaurants on meals served, with sworn statement every three months, and that the number of places licensed be kept at a minimum in each community. Clarence C. Knapp, president, and Jacob H. Snyder, secretary, signed the resolutions.

Sergt. Higgins Rites Set at Cumberland

("The Government has put out a new stamp called the Whistler's Mother stamp."—News item.)

"I wish to buy a postage stamp."

"Any particular model?"

"I hadn't given it much thought."

"Could we interest you in the very latest design?"

"Yes, indeed. It's the Whistler's Mother."

"Whose mother?"

"Whistler's."

"I don't know the lady."

* * * *

"Oh, come now; everybody knows Whistler's Mother."

"I don't think I even know Whistler, but you'll have to excuse me; I don't get around as much as I used to."

"Well, you've heard of him, of course."

"No! No! That's Wister. I'm really surprised. I thought everybody knew who Whistler was."

"Oh, I remember now. He was a ball player with the St. Louis Browns, wasn't he?"

"Naw. That was Sisler. This stamp has Whistler's mother on it, not Sisler's."

"Oh, well, I'm awfully sorry the matter came up. I can't stand here all day talking about people's mothers just to get a postage stamp."

* * * *

"Lissen, do you want a Whistler's Mother stamp or not?"

"I can take it or leave it."

"I know, lady, but the Government has spent a lot of time on this stamp and I want to put it over. It's a wonderful thing for promoting mother love. You love your mother, don't you?"

"Of course. So much so that the purchase of a 3-cent stamp as a manifestation of it would seem wholly inadequate."

"Yes, but it works like this . . . when I sell it I think of my mother, when you put it on a letter the man who gets it thinks of his mother. The mailman who delivers it thinks of his mother. When the envelope is thrown into the wastebasket the maid who picks it up thinks of her mother. Ultimately the ashman sees it fluttering in some pile of rubbish and thinks of his mother."

"Stop! You've got me! I'll take a dozen. But I still think it's a shame there's nothing said about Whsitler's father."

ANALYSIS.

There's a new Blues Eagle in the window,
There's a young, fresh bird in the store;
He is different today
From the other one, they say,
But he looks to me just like he did before.

The difference between the old Blue Eagle and the new one, as we understand it, is that the new one is not all white meat.

Vacant Homes Found for All Alley Residents

House District Committee Gets Report From Housing Group.

The Washington Committee on Housing, of which Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is honorary president, yesterday informed the House District Committee that enough vacant houses are available to provide quarters for alley dwellers when the slum clearance program, which The Washington Post advocated, begins.

In response to an inquiry from the committee, which has reported favorably on the Capper-Norton alley clearance bill, John Ihlder, secretary of the committee, wrote:

"While there are not as many vacancies as there were in 1929, when a survey was made by the committee, there are vacant a sufficient number of street houses near alleys, within rental ranges of alley houses, to care for occupants of alley houses during the first two or three years of operation of this bill.

"These houses are in the neighborhood now occupied by families of same race and approximately the same economic status as alley dwellers."

Ihlder said that it is his opinion that "the greater part of the alley blocks will continue to be devoted to low and medium-priced housing, there being insufficient demand for other uses of the alleys.

"The purpose is to re-plan and re-develop them so that present ditions will disappear," he said.

The committee, he said, is keeping in touch with the "vacancy situation."

If Your Material Is Gold, Any Use of It Is Valuable

By Robert Quillen

The happiest period of my life was a time of poverty and debt and insecurity.

I had borrowed $1,200 to equip a small print shop, and there was a $50 note to pay on the first of each month.

When the rent and paper bills were paid, there was seldom as much as $100 left to reward me. Any mishap would have meant disaster, for there was no reserve and no backlog of credit.

Yet I was blissfully happy and daily rejoiced in my good fortune.

Does that seem unreasonable? It isn't. I had everything required for the making of happiness.

I had hope. I had a feeling of independence. I had complete confidence in my ability to get ahead. I was free of fear. I liked my job and the people around me. I was free of vain regrets, malice, self-pity, jealousy and envy.

And there you have the raw material of all happiness.

You hear it said that different things are required to make different people happy, but that isn't true.

A dynamo is required to generate electricity, but any kind of power can be used to turn the dynamo—a windmill, a waterfall or a steam engine.

So it is with happiness. Since happiness is a state of mind, it is generated by certain thoughts. And though any number of things may prompt the right thoughts, these thoughts are the power that makes happiness and no other can take their place.

Hope is the first. Without it there is no possibility of happiness. Others almost equally essential are self-respect, confidence, love, compassion, and a tolerance that rises above self-pity, hate, envy and all uncharitableness.

It is easier to think such thoughts if you have the help of religion, wealth, fame and physical well-being.

But regardless of aids or handicaps, you have the ability to control your mind.

The kingdom of Heaven is within you. Seek ye first the kingdom of Heaven and all these things shall be added unto you.

Richmond, May 2 (AP).—John Q. Rhodes, director of the division of motor vehicles, today said Virginia is seeking a satisfactory agreement with Tennessee on the question of reciprocity in motor transport licenses.

Mr. Rhodes said more or less agreeable arrangements have been worked out with Virginia's other neighbor States, including Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia.

"We are having difficulty in working out an agreement with Tennessee, where operators of Virginia trucks still are made to pay heavy license fees for all operation beyond the border zones."

Whistler's Mother.

In the Century of Progress at Chicago last year the place most worth seeing was the Art Museum, with its marvelous collection of paintings; and of all those masterpieces, the one which had day after day the largest number of admirers was the portrait by Whistler of his mother.

I observe that F. P. A., in his daily column in The New York Herald-Tribune, says:

"If you want to win some money, bet somebody that he can't tell you the name of Whistler's portrait of his mother . . . . The answer is "Arrangement in Black and Gray."

This is no doubt true, although it is news to me. I never heard it called that; and the British Dictionary of National Biography does not mention the name. Anyhow, I'll bet it is not "Arrangement in Black and Gray" but "Arrangement in Black and Grey," the regular English spelling of that color.

This year of 1934 is the centenary of Whistler's birth. He was born at Lowell, Mass., July 10, 1834, and died in London, July 17, 1903. There ought to be commemorative exercises on the hundredth birthday, with exhibitions of his work. In this country his centenary will be celebrated with a U. S. stamp carrying the picture of his mother.

I was in Paris when he died, and one of the leading French reviews contained an article by a Frenchman, saying that Whistler was the greatest painter of the nineteenth century. As John Sargent was certainly the greatest portrait painter of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, it should give us a thrill of pride to remember that these two men of immortal genius were Americans.

Whistler was a bizarre personality; his clothes, his manners, his conversation were fantastic in the extreme. Never was there a greater contrast between a man's appearance and his work. His appearance was as conspicuous as an explosion; his work was the last word in austere simplicity. It is as if the devil in him—for he was possessed of a devil—had its outlet in everyday life and social contacts; while his genius was absolutely purged of all such alloy.

As it is often said that Whistler's painting of his mother was exhibited years ago in America, in a vain attempt to sell it, we should remember that when it was finished (about 1870) and offered for exhibitions, the British Royal Academy rejected it, and it was finally hung because one member of the council insisted on it. And Whistler, though he tried for years, was never elected to the Academy.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

PERHAPS you've got some friends who are going away where there isn't any talk of Society's Death Knell and the Second World War. I'm in some doubt as to where that would be, but one's friends are always so ingenious. Anyway, here's a little book to substitute for the usual fruit basket—"Fun on Route: Or, The Bon Voyage Book for People While on Boats, Trains, Planes or Waiting for That Damn Camel to Get Up" (Simon & Schuster, $2).

Clay Morgan has put together a cheery array of prose, poetry and pictures by the best talent available. Frank Scully, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Ogden Nash, Donal Ogden Stewart, our ubiquitous Mr. Benchley, that intrepid explorer Dr. Walter E. Traprock, and sundry others provide the written humor. Stella Benson, Aldous Huxley and Julian "Green Hell" Duguid do the serious relief. For pictures there are a number of old favorites, among them Helen E. Hokinson's classic of the two old ladies on shipboard—"Don't look now, but isn't that a porpoise over there?" If you haven't guessed it already, it is hereby revealed that the book is made up mostly of reprints from the New Yorker, with Harper's Bazaar, Doubleday-Doran and the Saturday Evening Post putting in brave little oars. Which isn't saying a thing save that it is very funny. All about travel, if I haven't made the point clear.

THEO. HALL.

Further, there are a number of pages of puzzles—cross-words, anagrams, questionnaires, and even a bibliography. The Venus pencil strapped on the cover adds the final touch which travelers will appreciate. Personally, I found the book a lot of fun on the side porch.

* * * *

I can't say as much for "Pad and Pencil Puzzles" (Crowell, $1), by Gladys Lloyd. It's full of such queries as "When is your tooth like a king?" and "What game is a vegetable?" After I'd worked on these a while, and then turned in quiet desperation to the back of the book to find the respective answers were "When it is crowned" and "Squash." I discovered my talents lay elsewhere, but it ought to be pure pie for a bright 14-year-old.

* * * *

Far more ingenious is "Mathemagic" (Simon & Schuster, $1.50), a collection of surprising tricks with numbers, sponsored by Royal Vale Heath, of the Society of American Magicians. One is called the "Lie Detector," an infallible process with which to tell if your female acquaintances are quite honest about their ages.

Another minor marvel is this: Take any number at all. Now add the number next higher in sequence. Add 9 to that result. Divide by 2. Now subtract your original number. The answer will always be 5.

The higher reaches of "Mathemagic" will make you dizzy, but you ought to enjoy it.

* * * *

If you're looking for ideas for a party, don't forget Jerome S. Meyer's "Mental Whoopee" (Simon & Schuster, $1.)—seven puzzles, each printed in 20 duplicate sheets to be passed around the harassed group. There's a street scene to be looked at for three minutes and reported upon, a progressive anagram, one of those horrible compound syllogisms to be resolved, and an even more ghastly brain-picker made up of such directions as this—"If Baltimore is larger than Salt Lake City cross out Boston and write Omaha to the left of Toledo." But I have met people who lap up that sort of thing.

* * * *

Descending to the realm of mere bridge is like coming out of the woods into bright sunlight. Milton C. Work and Olive Avery Peterson, who seem to have won several hundredweight of trophies by their new system, present it fully in "The Work-Peterson Accurate Valuation System of Contract Bridge" (Winston, $1.50). After teaching every other method of play, they claim that their current discoveries provide more accurate and usable advice for the average player. I wouldn't know about that—cards to me are something with which to play poker.

* * * *

To round up the field of polite indoor amusement comes the revised edition of one of the many "Hoyles"—"The New Hoyle: Standard Games" (Whitman, $1), edited by Paul H. Seymour. It gives the rules of everything from baccaret and bunco to ping pong, chess and camelot.

Strangely, the lists of Best Books for a Desert Island never include such a volume as this. It would be my first choice.

That wonderful baby in your home doesn't know that VITAMIN D in his daily diet is essential for the proper development of bones and to prevent rickets. But nutritional investigators tell us just that.

He's a cute little thing as he kicks his dimpled legs. He has implicit faith in you—and you, on your part, are vitally concerned with the things that will help him develop into a healthy, robust "little man."

VITAMIN D MILK combines two of the vital necessities for children's growth—pure, fresh milk and "Vitamin D." Excellent, too, for expectant or nursing mothers.

That's why so many mothers are now ordering Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase VITAMIN D MILK—of the same high quality and purity as our pasteurized milk, yet in one respect IMPORTANTLY DIFFERENT from all other milks. Trade Bodies Today to Fight Ban on Parking

Substitute Plan Ready for Presentation to D. C. Commissioners.

Demands that the parking ban on F, G and Seventh streets be suspended at once, because downtown Washington is being converted into "a Main Street," will be made to the District Commissioners by trade body heads at a public hearing beginning at 10 a. m. today.

Arthur J. Sundlun, general chairman of the trade organization committee, announced that the substitute plan drawn up by his committee will be submitted to the Commissioners, with the recommendation that it be put in force at once as an experiment in place of the present ban.

"Any one can see the deserted appearance of our downtown streets," Mr. Sundlun said. "This is usually a busy shopping season, but downtown Washington now looks as it it were a holiday. It has all the appearance of a Main Street in a small town. This is not at all becoming to the National Capital.

Call Blow to Trade.

"The greatest argument in favor of suspension of the ban is the fact that business is being hurt," Mr. Sundlun added. "This injury that is affecting business is going to affect all of us. The entire situation is a very serious thing for Washington, and I am sure the Commissioners will give our substitute plan fair and proper consideration.

"If our plan is given a trial I am sure we will prove that the ban experiment has been too drastic."

Mr. Sundlun said that a great many more protests from merchants were received yesterday, declaring that their business is being hurt.

Jelleff to Protest.

The trade committee's demand for an immediate change will be bolstered by arguments from individual business men and citizens' association heads. Frank R. Jelleff, leading F street merchant, will take a leading part in these arguments from the floor. His protests are expected to be a great deal more violent because the Commissioners have paid no heed to his insistence that the ban be suspended without going through the formality of a public hearing.

The trade body committee made its final plans for the part it will take in the hearing at a meeting yesterday. The members voted unanimously to adhere to the provisions of the substitute plan. This plan calls for extension of the parking ban between 8 and 9:30 a. m. and between 4 and 6 p. m., restoration of one-hour parking during the remainder of the day, cancellation of all special parking privileges in front of stores and creation of loading zones of 100 feet in each block. Impoundment of automobiles parked overtime also is recommended.

Taxi Insurance Bill Is Presented

Allen Dissents on Report by Commissioners.

Compulsory liability insurance for taxicab operators was favored by the District Commissioners in a report sent yesterday to the House and Senate District Committees, but bearing a dissenting opinion by Commissioner George E. Allen.

The bill would require taxicab owners to provide protection for the public against losses from accidents due to negligence of taxicab drivers. Commissioner Allen declared it would be unfair to require taxicab owners to post liability insurance while there is no such requirement for all automobile owners.

If the bill is enacted, Commissioner Allen believes, at least 1,000 drivers would be driven from business and an increase in taxi fares would follow. The bill was drafted by Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, who prepared a brief urging its enactment.

House Adopts Five Sections Of Stock Market Control Bill

G. Cooper, of Ohio, ranking minority member, called on the House to drop "party politics."

"This is too important a bill to be made a political football," he said.

Britten insisted he had not objected to the presence of Cohen, but merely pointed out he was there.

House Rules Cited.

But Martin, reading from a manual of the House rules, said he would have to object if Cohen returned. He said the rules clearly provide for only one committee "clerk" to be present when a bill is considered, adding:

"This is a poor policy to innaugurate at this time."

Representative Carl E. Mapes, Michigan Republican, a member of the committee, came to Rayburn's defense. He said the committee chairman had inquired if he had any objection to Cohen's presence on the floor, and Mapes told him he did not.

Declaring Britten's remarks were "a reflection on every member of the Interstate Commerce Committee," Representative Samuel B. Pettengill (Democrat), Indiana, asked that they be expunged.

But he did not press his motion when Britten consented to revise that portion of his statement holding Corcoran and Cohen "practically wrote the legislation."

"Little Red House" Injected.

The discussion was precipitated when the Illinois legislator made reference to "the little red house in Georgetown," in which he charged several days ago that Corcoran, Cohen and other so-called junior members of the "brain trust" live and talk over legislation.

"This is their baby," said Britten. "They wrote it. Under a smokescreen of stock market regulation, they have written complicated language that will control every industry in the United States."

Earlier, the House had concluded seven hours set debate on the measure, then read through, without amendment, the first 13 pages of the 61-page bill. Among provisions passed without change was controversial Section 2, the so-called "stump speech" and constitutional saving clause of the bill. This statement of purposes, declaring exchange regulation "affected with a National public interest," was drastically revised by the Senate Banking Committee.

Only one amendment was proposed during early consideration of the bill, and that was reserved for introduction later at its "proper" place in the bill.

It was by Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, and it proposed to vest administration of the measure in an independent commission of three appointed by the President, instead of the Federal Trade Commission.

Bulwinkle charged the Federal Trade Commission "has already started to work against my amendment," adding:

"They should be satisfied with the power they now have."

He said he could cite 17 instances where the commission was given power by Congress to promulgate rules and regulations.

Bulwinkle also served notice he would attempt to revise the whole section dealing with reports by corporations.

Provisions Opposed.

Republican support for the Bulwinkle amendment setting up an independent commission was hinted by Britten and Representative Fish (Republican), New York. Britten urged that its membership be increased and provision be made for a representative of the New York Stock Exchange.

Bulwinkle said he would consent to no such revision.

The Senate bill now provides for an independent commission with five members appointed by the President. There has been talk of a "trade" in conference, with the House accepting the proposed independent commission, and the Senate agreeing to the House 45 per cent margin requirement.

Greeks Study Dictatorship

Government May Wink at Coup as Last Resort to Hold Power.

Athens, May 2 (AP).—The streets and coffee shops of Athens hummed today with talk of a dictatorship as a result of the stiff political opposition the government faces on international and domestic policy.

It is an open secret that one Cabinet member, Gen. George Kondylis, Minister of War, favors such a move. In the event of a dictatorship it is rumored he would get the call to assume power.

The general, one of Greece's strong men and popular with the army, declared in an interview that "nowadays dictatorship is the normal condition of a state."

This statement touched off speculation, which peacetable conferences between administration representatives and the opposition has allayed but little.

Philippines to Seek Sugar Control Change

Manila, May 2 (AP).—Pointing to a prospective heavy surplus of Philippine sugar under the Jones-Costigan sugar control act because the measure now before President Roosevelt would make its provisions retroactive to January 1, the Philippine House tonight unanimously adopted a resolution asking Congress to alter the provisions.

If this appeal to Congress sails, the resolution urged that President Roosevelt veto or suspend application of the act to the Philippines during 1934.

District PWA Loan Approved By House Body

The bill to authorize the District Commissioners to borrow $20,000,000 from the Public Works Administration moved a step closed to enactment yesterday when the House District Committee voted to report it favorably and to ask for a special rule to expedite passage.

No opposition was voiced at the committee hearing, but Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, declined to vote on the ground that he had not attended the joint Senate-House hearing and was therefore not familiar with the legislation.

Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, has already announced that he would oppose the bill on the House floor.

The committee's action came after Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman and Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, had explained that the compromise plan for repaying the PWA loan, together with Cramton parks loan, as adopted in the Senate, was agreeable to both parties.

An unsuccessful attempt was made by Dr. George F. Bowerman, District librarian, and Dr. George C. Havenner, representing the Federation of Citizens Associations, to include branch libraries in the list of municipal projects for which the money may be spent.

"The District library system is very backward," Dr. Bowerman said. "Only 38 per cent of our population is now served by our library facilities."

When Prettyman explained that the commissioners expected to provide for additional branch libraries in the annual appropriations, Dr. Bowerman expressed a fear that the PWA loan bill might prevent such action.

Chairman Norton of the House District Committee said that while she was sympathetic to the proposed amendment she feared that any change in the Senate bill might block passage of the measure at this session. She said the amendment should have been offered to the Senate Committee.

Several members of the committee asked whether the Government would be expected to repay any part of the 70 per cent of the loan which the District is expected to repay. They were assured by Prettyman that it would not.

Patman observed: "While I won't say that the District is a chiseler, there are a lot of chiselers in the District."

Mrs. Norton said after the meeting that she would go before the Rules Committee at the first opportunity, to ask for a rule to present the bill for special consideration in the House. She said House leaders said that it probably could not be offered before the latter part of next week.

The committee also voted to report five other District bills, and Mrs. Norton urged all members to be present at the two remaining District days in the House, so that many of the pending measures may be passed before Congress adjourns.

Other Bills on Docket.

The other bills approved are:

The Patman bill, to exempt American Legion property in the District from taxation, with an amendment that the exemption continue only so long as the property is not used for commercial purposes.

A bill to prohibit misrepresentation and deception in the sale of milk and cream, with an amendment applying theac t to signs on milk-carrying vehicles.

A bill to furnish vocational education to the orphans of soldiers, sailors, and marines who were killed in the World War. This would affect 109 children, at present, and cost $3,600 a year.

An amendment to the District liquor act to lower the tax on marine vessels to the same scale evharged railway dining cars.

An amendment to the insurance act to provide additional protection for workmen. The bill has already passed the Senate.

Representative Harlan (Democrat), Ohio, sought action on his bill to amend the life insurance code, but was told that it had little chance of passage. He said he would try to get a special rule.

His Hair Roots are NOT Dead

Hair roots are a part of the human body and do not "die" as long as the body itself lives. They become inactive when (1) they are attacked by some local scalp disorder (such as dandruff) or (2) when they have not received sufficient nourishment. Hair roots are alive, even in a bald scalp and are ready to respond to proper stimulative treatment.

Seventeen years ago Paul A. Thomas discovered the proper method of stimulating the dormant sources of hair growth. His method has been improved each year and today is as near perfect as any scalp treatment can be. First, Thomas treatment overcomes all local scalp infections, stops scalp itch and abnormal hair fall. It then stimulates the tiny glands in the scalp which nourish the hair. Thus, "sleeping hair" obtains sufficient strength to grow again and become visible on the scalp.

Come in today and learn how Thomas can help you to have a good, healthy head of hair. Thomas never makes a charge for consultation or complete scalp examination. All service is rendered in private.

Capital Folk Start Derby Trip Tonight

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Trains, planes and automobiles today and tomorrow will carry thousands of excursionists from many cities, speeding to be at Louisville, Ky., when the flag drops and the jockeys spur their mounts into the running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs on Saturday.

Aboard one of the special cars that will leave Washington for Louisville tonight will be Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Connor and a party of guests. Mrs. Connor is the National Democratic committeewoman from Kentucky, and with Mr. Connor has been spending the winter at the Carlton. Each year they entertain a large party at the Derby and at noon breakfast in the clubhouse at Churchill Downs.

Alphabetical Game.

The invitation for the Connors' party afforded considerable amusement. Printed in black on squares of bright red paper, they pictured a race horse at the top. On the left were the legends: "No Regrets Accepted," and "Ponies without Alibis."

Recipients soon divined that the cards were written in "New Deal parlance," and after reading the lines on the opposite side of the card, "Real Fun Certain," and "Economic Relief Assured," they were convinced that the invitation included members of the "New Deal" and indeed it did.

Among the guests will be the Postmaster General, Mr. James A. Farley; the administrator of the NRA, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson; Representative and Mrs. John Y. Brown; the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Silliman Evans; the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Lawrence W. Robert.

Derby Party Guests.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Emil Edwards Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Amon Carter, of Fort Worth, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. William Cutler, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Washer, Mr. Brian McMahon, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ben. Talbott, of Kentucky; the Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky and Mrs. Albert Chandler, Mr. Sheridan Talbott, United States Consul at Prague; Mr. Joseph Keenan, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bush, Mr. Daniel McGrath, Mrs. Edgar Orme, Mr. Ralph Morrison, of San Antonio, Tex.; Miss Frances Robinson, Mr. Kenneth Watson, Col. and Mrs. Frank Rash, of Kentucky; Mr. James Robinson, of Atlanta; Mr. Marvin McIntyre, Mr. William Celestine, Mrs. Clare Kite, Mr. Harry Hopkins, Mr. Ambrose O'Connell, and Mrs. John Tuthill, of New York.

The party will arrive in Louisville tomorrow morning and will attend the luncheon given annually by the Junior Board of Trade of Louisville. In the evening the group will attend the dinner given at the Kentucky Hotel by "The Kentucky Colonels," and later will attend several parties given by friends of Mr. and Mrs. Connor.

Finessing Partner's Lead.

One of the maxims that were sound in Whist and have been handed down to the present generation of Bridge players by their Whist ancestors is "Never finesse against your partner." The principle still has its application: For instance, if there are no cards of honor rank in the Dummy, the finesse, if made against partner, is bound to lose, or anyway can not gain a trick. But there are situations in which, realizing that fact full well, the defending player should finesse an honor to drive out a stopper in the Declarer's hand.

West, Dealer.

	♠ A Q 5 ♡ A 10 9 5 ◇ Q 7 5 ♣ 9 5 4
♠ 7 6 ♡ K 6 4 ◇ A K J 6 4 ♣ J 7 6	N W E S	♠ K 8 3 ♡ Q J 7 2 ◇ 10 8 3 ♣ A K Q
	♠ J 10 9 4 3 ♡ 8 3 ◇ 9 2 ♣ 10 8 3 2

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
1◇	Pass (1)	2NT	Pass
3◇ (2)	Pass	3NT (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—North's hand is too weak for a Takeout Double. It has less than three honor-tricks.

2—West's hand was almost a minimum Opening but in view of his partner's two-notrump bid he should bid again because of added length in diamonds. After all, his diamond suit might have been of only four cards.

3—East, with a balanced hand and three honor-tricks, naturally contracts for game.

South made the Opening lead of the Knave of spades. North covered with the Queen, making the so-called "finessee against his partner." The Declarer, not knowing that North had the Ace, felt compelled to win with the King, and East now had to stake his hope of winning the hand on a diamond finesse. When this lost, North laid down the Ace of spades and returned the last spade, permitting his partner to win two setting tricks.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.

	♠ A 10 6 4 ♡ 9 8 4 ◇ 7 4 ♣ A 9 7 3
♠ 5 3 2 ♡ J 10 6 ◇ 9 ♣ Q J 8 6 5 2	N W E S	♠ Q 9 7 ♡ A 3 2 ◇ Q J 10 8 5 2 ♣ K
	♠ K J 8 ♡ K Q 7 5 ◇ A K 6 3 ♣ 10 4

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Cosmetics Line Comes Through With Presents

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A LARGE BEAUTY concern is making this a week of special gifts. With each $1 (or more) purchase a gift package containing three creams is presented.

The liquefying cream is an excellent cleanser for oily skins. It's a frost white preparation which melts instantly from warmth of the fingers. It loosens and removes every trace of dirt, dust and makeup.

Another cream is a boon to dry skin. Its rich base is soothing to sensitive skins, and helps supply the lacking oils.

The third cream is a dry skin cleanser. While it is chasing away the outer coating of makeup and dirt, it is working all the while to refreshen the skin.

Of course, it takes a $1 purchase before the gift package is yours. But it's a simple matter to find at least a half dozen things you need and want.

The face powders, rouges, lipsticks, eye shadows and the line's other cosmetics have long been popular with discriminating shoppers. But there is a finishing lotion which would be particularly useful at this time of year. After it has been rubbed over the neck, arms and shoulders, it gives them a creamy, finished look, and at the same time prevents wind burn and freckles. Don't forget May with its temperamental weather is a bad freckling season! Better begin warding off right now while such an opportunity is a-knocking.

* * * *

Easy Ironing.

An extra heavy quality of ironing board cover fits easily over the board and laces tightly underneath. Once it's adjusted there's never a crease nor wrinkle to worry about, and no chance for that eternal slipping and sliding out of place. Its appeal is further enhanced by a price of 28 cents.

* * * *

Pewter for Vegetables.

In the first place, it's a practical size. In the second place, it's attractive. And in the third place, it's a combination set. When the top is taken off it can be used as a vegetable dish, a candy bowl, or conserve plate.

During a store-wide sale this alluring little contraption sells for the sum of 79 cents!

* * * *

For the Damaging Young.

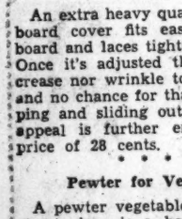
Tea sets never fail to please the very young hostess. There are some on hand now which will last her long and well—for they're proof against breaking. Just what they're made of won't interest her—its composition something, with a name for chemists. But she can take to hurling saucers, or spinning plates, and they'll stand up under the strain.

It's as complete a set as a child could want—cookie plates, cups, saucers, teapot, sugar bowl and cream pitcher.

* * * *

You Can Guess This.

Four numbers make the name of a famous refreshant and fragrance—an eau de cologne with no bouquet scent, but the subtle tangy sweetness of numerous sweet and spicy things.



It is being sold now in a package with a transparent white "rose glycerin" soap. Frequently the blue and gold covering catches the shopper's eye and leads her to buy. But once she has become familiar with the quality of the product—it takes neither sale price nor blue-gold wrapper to lure her back.

At present the package is selling for $1.20. Another package of lavender water and lavender soap retails for 85 cents.

* * * *

It's a Shame.

It seems a shame the heavy brass smoking set on sale for $2 hasn't been gobbled up by some alert shopper. It includes a medium-sized tray, two ash trays, a match box and cigarette box, both trimmed in jade.

* * * *

To Enhance Flowers.

Few and far between are the people who do not want to grow fern, ivy, cactus or something in the house. Any of these and a variety of others can give a touch of freshness and greenness to a room. But in plain pottery pots, half their charm is taken away. Both pot and plant inside these containers are enhanced tenfold.

* * * *

Varicolored Compacts.

An assortment of compacts in varicolored enamel cases sold once upon a time for 50 cents. Now they're going—and going rapidly—for 29 cents.

Don't think they're cheap, shoddy compacts. That's wrong. They are of a well-known make. It's a case of choosing your type, loose or cake powder, choosing your color and taking advantage of an exceptional sale.

America Getting Caste System, Educator Says

A CASTE SYSTEM is growing up in America as a result of the depression, believes Miss Lillian Herstein, prominent Chicago educator and lecturer.

Well-to-Do Parents Withdrawing Children From Public Schools as Depression Causes Retrenchment on "Frills and Fads" Subjects.

A CASTE SYSTEM is growing up in the United States as one of the tolls of the depression. So believes Miss Lillian Herstein, prominent Chicago educator, in Washington this week to give a series of lectures on the effect of the recent economic condition on the public schools.

Members of the upper middle class are taking their children out of the public schools, says Miss Herstein, because the curriculum has been emasculated by civic leaders who work under the guise of "doing away with frills and fads."

"This is resulting in a caste system in which the children of the well-to-do are educated in private schools," she asserted. "But this is not so deplorable as the fact the people who get the best educations will be in the minority when these children grow up, and the country will be run by the majority, who, educated in poorly equipped public schools, will be unable to cope with the increasingly complex problems of our industrial democracy. The people who clamor to do away with the so-called educational "fads" must realize a knowledge of the three r's is not enough to equip a child to face life today realistically."

"The condition is much worse than that," she said. "Modern boys and girls are becoming cynical and mercenary, lacking the high idealism that went into the founding of our country. They don't care about principles, they aren't interested in doing something for humanity. They want to know how they can put something over, how they can make the most money.

"The reason? Their elders. They have seen their parents lose the savings of a lifetime in banks run by men without honesty and ethics. They have seen these same men lauded and put in high places. They come to the conclusion that honesty and idealism don't pay."

Many young people, going out into the world today, and finding there is no place for them, become bitter in their denunciation of college education, according to Miss Herstein.

"But it isn't the fault of the college that teaches them there is no work for them," she said. "Just as there are millions of people starving while farmers are unable to sell their products, and as there are millions of people in need of medical attention who can not pay their doctors, so there are children going untaught while teachers are out of work. There is a need for the college-trained person. The problem of adjusting this situation is one which is facing leading citizens of today; new problems will face leaders of tomorrow. How can they solve them without the necessary training?

"Unless students have a broad curriculum, in which the humanitarian subjects are taught, the generation of today will be lost when the time comes for them to assume leadership."

Painter, Sculptor Win Prix de Rome

New York, May 2 (U.P.).—A picture of a Mexican Indian and a carving of a dying centaur today won for two young men the annual Prix de Rome, carrying scholarships for two years' study abroad.

Both the winners, Gilbert Banever, 21, Hartford, Conn., in painting, and Reuben Robert Kramer, 24, Baltimore, in sculpture, had worked their way through school.

Banever, whose chief interest is mural painting, was an evening monitor at Yale and worked in the cataloguing department during days to earn tuition fees. In spare moments he made posters for commercial artists. Kramer secretly pursued his art while his parents urged him to study law or medicine.

Sahara Desert Big Oasis Once, Explorers Say

Archeological Expedition Finds Drawings to Substantiate Theory.

Algiers, May 2 (U.P.).—Carvings and drawings executed on stone by cave dwellers several thousand years ago were cited by members of the Gautier-Reygasse archeological expedition in their report to the Academy of Sciences today as proof the Sahara once was a garden of roses and tropical vegetation.

This once green countryside is now buried under thousands of miles of shifting dunes—a "land of thirst" inhabited only by a few bands of desert Berbers. Digging into the dunes, 50 miles south of Port Polignac, members of the mission found ample traces of a lost civilization.

On a vast plateau, between high ridges of black and rose rocks, and in the dried beds of rivers, the two Algiers scientists, Profs. Gautier and Reygasse, found hundreds of carved stones. On the ridges they discovered paintings in ochre, undamaged by the centuries.

On one of the ridges they found a drawing and carving of a giraffe, eight meters high. In a realist style the artists portrayed the animals of their hunts. They pictured nude men, many wearing masks or animal tails. The women in the designs always were dressed in long gowns.

Woman May Get League Position

Geneva, May 2 (U.P.).—Miss Sarah Wambaugh, of Boston, expert on plebiscites and international matters, may be named to the League of Nations commission to supervise the Saar plebiscite, it was learned today.

The league committee preparing for the plebiscite appointed her as an expert adviser with the possibility the council may make her a member of the commission when it is formed on May 14. With two other neutral members, Miss Wambaugh will arrive shortly to attend a meeting of the committee on May 12.

The league committee is expected to reject a proposal for the importation of neutral soldiery into the Saar during the plebiscite.

I WAS A SPY!

By MARTHE McKENNA

What Has Gone Before.

Marthe Cnockaert McKenna, Belgian woman, served as a British secret agent during the World War. In previous installments of this fascinating story, she told of the tumultuous events—death and destruction—that marked the German invasion of her country. She became attached as a nurse in a German military hospital. Then—she became a spy. A young German officer flirts with her.

THEY MUST have somehow procured him a special pass, for there were nights when I let the three of them in, stumbling and noisily intoxicated, hours after the official curfew. I do not think the stranger was ever really drunk on those occasions, for although he always roared as loudly as the others, I well remember the night that he deliberately turned and winked at me while the Germans were groping their way up the stairs ahead of him.

ADD WED FICTION

Keeps Eyes Open.

During the succeeding days I kept my eyes very wide open and my ears always on the alert. It was the rickety old steam-trams of Roulers, which the German troops had nicknamed "Ca-ne-fait-rien", because they were continuously breaking down, which gave me my first idea. I used to pass them puffing and rattling, and leaving great clouds of dirty black smoke behind them as they regularly carried resigned-looking soldiers or loads of shells or rifle ammunition up to the German second line.

If only I could discover the day and time of arrival of a weekly ordnance train, I might inform the British air craft through the medium of No. 63, and the station could be bombed. The only way to get the necessary information was to make friends with one of the German military railway transport officials, in hopes he would give something away unwittingly. I had ample excuse for going to the station, as I was often detailed to escort German wounded there in the ambulance who were being sent to hospitals further back.

One sunny afternoon I stood on the platform watching a train with some of my wounded gliding into the distance. It was a slack time and they did not need me at the hospital for two hours. I had told the ambulance driver I would walk back slowly as it was a lively day. The thought had just occurred to me that unless I could find some specific excuse to remain in the station it would be advisable to leave, when a voice behind me chirped:

"Liebe Fraulein, I am charmed that you should with your lovely presence so often this station grace."

Officer Flirts.

"I was enjoying the beautiful weather," I smiled. "For once we are not busy at the hospital, and I have a few hours to myself. You, of course, Herr Hauptmann, are more than fully occupied with your heavy duties."

"No, Fraulein," he preened himself, "for the first time in days I, too, am free." Looking highly pleased with the way matters were progressing between us, he drew out his cigarette case.

"You will smoke, Fraulein?"

"Not in the open, thank you, Herr Hauptmann."

"Ah, that is simple, come along to my office, Fraulein—do allow me to give you tea there."

Three minutes later we were sitting in his inner office enjoying cigarettes, while outside convict-shaven orderlies were answering the persistent telephone and hammering typewriters. For about a quarter of an hour our conversation was trivial. Whenever I looked away from him I knew that he was watching me. I realized that my determination to find what I wanted had driven out all nervousness, and I was deliberately enjoying myself.

"In Belgium I am lost," he mourned, dismally following the curling spiral of cigarette smoke. "I am a widower, but in Hanover I have my two young daughters, and they mean much to me."

"So, he is a widower," I thought complacently to myself, and seating myself on the office table beside his chair, gazed down upon him with eyes of sympathy.

"Yes, war is terrible," I said. "The whole thing is so futile, and so sad."

As though by accident, I felt his podgy little hand close over mine. I did not move. I felt that he was becoming "malleable." The door opened and an orderly clicked to attention.

"You are wanted urgently on the telephone, sir."

He reentered a few minutes later.

"Well, Fraulein, it is work for me as usual, and at once." I rose to leave, and as I hoped it had the desired effect.

"Fraulein," he told me, "I hope that I shall see you again. Perhaps there is some time when we are both free when we could go out together."

"There is nothing I should like better," I nodded meltingly. "It is Monday today, for what parts of this week are you free?"

"Friday afternoon and evening, Liebe Fraulein, would suit me well. I could get a special pass and we might run over to Ghent and spend a really nice evening! What do you say?"

He caught my hands and smirked up at me. Somehow it made me think of a puppy with its tongue hanging out. I pretended to think a moment.

"Yes," I said slowly, "we will spend Friday afternoon and evening together—and we will have a really good time!" I loosed my hands, opened the door and with a soft glance over my shoulder bid "Good-by" to the bowing form of my comic little cavalier.

Quickening my footsteps I reached home fierce and breathless, wrote the necessary information regarding the hours the ordnance train would lie in the station, and concealed the scrap of paper in my hair. When I got away from the hospital that evening I would take it around No. 63. If only the mysterious he or she could get the news to the British Flying Corps in time—well, Roulers was a smallish station, and if the ammunition train blew up there would certainly not be much of it left!

All that afternoon and evening at the hospital I could not concentrate upon the work in hand. Twice the surgeon found fault with me irritably, and my nerves had become so on edge that involuntarily I found myself weeping. I had had to stay later than usual because it was necessary for me to attend at an emergency operation. The Oberartz evidently thought I was overwrought.

"Take this sedative, Fraulein," he urged gently, "we can finish without you tonight. Go home right away and get a long night's rest, and let me know how you feel tomorrow."

He was a dear, that gray-headed chief-surgeon, and unselfish, too. But on that night he could not have thought of a better way of helping me. It was dark, and the streets were deserted.

The darkened street lamp threw pools of light onto the pavement, outside whose radiance I twice heard patrols tramp by me. Either they recognized me or where intent on other things, for I went unchallenged. Away by Ypres the guns were growling and thudding, and the western horizon flickered with the rising lights of Verey shells.

I paused at the mouth of the alleyway, but all was silence. Then I slipped toward the fifth window and tapped. As before it slid upward noiselessly, and the white hand appeared and vanished with my note. With a sense of wonderful relief I returned home. The affair now was out of my hands, at any rate. I could do nothing either to promote or avert disaster. I could only wait. . . .

* * * *

He was standing under the light of the lantern in the passage as I opened the front door, a tall military policeman.

"Fraulein Cnockaert?" he asked gruffly. My heart leaped to my mouth and ice-cold beads of perspiration burst out on my brow. Unable to speak, I nodded, and swallowed hard to still my rising agitation.

"Please come with me," the man went on. "The officers have some questions they wish to put to you." The pounding of my heart seemed to fill the whole passage with sounds as I dumbly followed the soldier into the kitchen like one going to execution. Two officers of military police whom I knew well by sight sat at the table. They rose as I entered and bowed punctiliously.

"Will not the Fraulein sit?" suggested he whom I took to be the senior of the two, a stocky man with red hair. In a dream I sat down in the chair which he pushed toward me. I was dazed at this sudden turn of events. What had the German police discovered? Was my career as a secret agent of Belgium to be ended after this first coup? I heard my interrogator's voice as something far away.

"Fraulein Cnockaert," he said, "what has become of the woman, Lucelle Deldonck? She is your friend—eh? She was seen in Roulers very recently."

There was a pause. A dead weight lay over my heart and my nails dug into the perspiration-soaked palms of my hands. The officer leaned toward me.

"Where is Lucelle Deldonck, now?" he pronounced slowly watching me closely. I shrugged my shoulders feebly, numbed into silence. Then they did know of my double role!

"Lucelle Deldonck disappeared when your soldiers raided the cellar in Westroosebeke where we and many other harmless people had taken refuge. For all I know they may have killed her. Most of them were drunk, and they were certainly free enough with their weapons."

Apparently he was satisfied. Signing to his companions to go and stamping his newly lighted cigarette out on the floor, he left the kitchen with a "Very well, Fraulein Cnockaert. Perhaps we have worried you unnecessarily considering the excellent work which I am told you are doing for our wounded in the hospital.

Within five minutes I was alone in my own room, the police forgotten, wondering, hoping, fearing, what would be the result of that information I had passed to No. 63.

Aerial Bombardment.

I extinguished the light, and must have fallen into a doze.

"Marthe, Marthe, to the cellar!" My mother leaned over the bed shaking me.

Outside the night was hideous with the crashing barrage of anti-aircraft guns, the shrieking of sirens, the shouting of men and the clatter of hurrying feet. Once in a lull of the firing I heard the sinister growl of engines, a purr which spelt flaming death to the watchers below. I leaped out of bed, threw a cloak over my nightdress and tore downstairs, and crouched fascinated in the open doorway. Silver knives of the searchlights were slicing the sky, quartering this way and that. Transcending all sounds came that whistling moan of a descending bomb, a distant flash over the roof tops, an earth-shaking thud. The bomb had missed its mark. Machine guns spat savagely from posts on the roofs, yellow and scarlet stars blossomed against the clouds, shrapnel seeking the raiders; but of these I could make out nothing. I felt a thrilling sense of exaltation. The British had had my message.

Formal Suits and Wide Hats Go Forth for Spring Dining

WHAT TO WEAR for restaurant dining at an hour when the sun's just going down? The answer is: A new dinner suit like the one above.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, May 2.—There's a sunny side to evenings right now. You find it in those pleasant costumes worn these longer daylight days when dining out starts at an hour when the sun is still up.

In restaurants, roof gardens, country inns and clubs you'll see them, distinguished by their formal informality and the hats which are worn with them.

Some sleeves will be long, for the long-sleeved dinner dress which was so much in fashion during the winter is still smart in summer versions. Made of lace or chiffon, it is cool even with sleeves.

Colorful prints in rather large floral patterns on dark grounds, both in crepes and chiffons, are a popular medium.

These may be made in several attractive ways. Short puffed sleeves, rippling capes or berthas and fichu necklines are charming in these materials.

Very new * * * and you won't see nearly so many of these as of the dresses * * * is the tailored dinner suit with a fitted hip-length jacket and a formal gown beneath. It's this type daylight dining costume we've had sketched.

Frocks of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

A Cure for Spring Fever —a Crisp Vegetable or Fruit Salad.

By Susan Mills.

SALADS HAVE a way of brightening dull appetites and monotonous meals. They're the modern cure for spring fever and the menu blues that are apt to settle down on the most well-regulated household.

Tender young vegetables, lima beans, beets, carrots, tiny onions lend themselves agreeably to the making of spring salads. And fruits are no less genial. Strawberries and fresh pineapple, served together or separately, add a touch of color and interest to any table.

Here are a few entrys in the salad parade.

Tomatoe Relish Salad.

Peel tomatoes and cut each in half crosswise. Put together again with a generous filling of cream or cottage cheese relish, and place each tomato on crisp lettuce. Garnish with salad dressing and a slice of stuffed olive.

Molded Pineapple and Cherry Salad.

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
½ cup hot water
1½ cups ginger ale
¼ cup nut meats, finely cut
¼ cup celery, finely cut
½ cup pineapple, diced and drained
½ cup cherries, drained and pitted.

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Chill. Add ginger ale. When slightly thickened, add nuts, celery, and fruit. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with whole cherries. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

Either fresh or canned pineapple and cherries may be used. Fresh pineapple may have to be sweetened.

Chicken and Vegetable Salad.

1½ cups cold cooked chicken, diced
¾ cup celery, diced
¾ cup cold boiled potatoes, diced
¾ cup cold cooked peas
¾ teaspoon salt
2 small fresh tomatoes, skinned and diced
1 cup mayonnaise

Blend ingredients in order given with the mayonnaise. Chill. Serve on crisp lettuce with additional mayonnaise and slices of hard-cooked egg as garnish. Serves 8.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The Machinery of Sight.

The eye presents much better evidence of the machinery by which the force, light, can be transmitted into biologic effects by means of a chemical substance. This substance goes by the name visual purple, and this story relates to it.

The retina is a curtain of material hung at the back of the eyeball for the purpose of catching light and transforming it into a nerve force capable of traveling along a cable called the optic nerve and registering in a part of the brain called the sight center.

Light, as such, can not travel along this cable nor register in the sight center. It must first be changed into a new force—a new juice, to borrow a phrase from the electric dictionary. This transformation is made in the retina by microscopic cells called rods and cones and, more closely still, by a substance known as visual purple.

The delicacy of this visual purple and also the rapidity with which it can be built up varies naturally in different animals. There is supposed to be much of it, and that is of good quality, in animals that feed at night.

In certain disorders of man this visual purple is not regenerated as rapidly as it should be. This is the explanation of temporary blindness following exposure to bright light, as in snow blindness and blindness in welders. This is the explanation of the fact that welders and furnace men wear pigmented goggles, and also of the advice given people to wear pigmented glasses when they look at eclipses of the sun.

After some exposures the retina loses permanently the power to reproduce visual purple, with permanent blindness as a result.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

If May 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until noon, from 1 to 3 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 10 p. m. until midnight.

If a woman and born on May 3, avoid making a mystery out of commonplace things. You will find that relatives and friends do not enjoy your being enigmatical where there is no justification for it. The best preventive for curiosity on the part of others concerning your personal affairs is to avoid a pose that might be construed as secretive.

The child whose birthday is May 3, when old enough to understand, must be taught prompt obedience will have its reward, but failure to comply when told to do something will result in trouble.

The man born on May 3 has a keenly analytical mind. If this is your natal day, your instinct that enables your getting to the bottom of complicated issues is remarkable.

Here's a Woman Who Tells a Nation-Full of Feminity What Colors to Wear

By Virginia Lee Warren.

It is blue-eyed, plump-cheeked, sparkling Mrs. Rorke who decides whether green or purple will be the most popular color for evening gowns next year; whether dental floss is more appealing in pure white or a rich cream shade.

What Color Bread?

Just now she is selecting a certain shade of brown to be used by all bakers for whole wheat bread. After Mrs. Rorke has made up her mind, it will be possible to buy a loaf of bread in Spokane that is exactly the same shade as one baked in Pensacola.

She hasn't yet figured out why bakers want a uniform color code. But she knows beyond a doubt why clothing manufacturers, from shoemakers to milliners, want colors stabilized.

"It saves them millions of dollars," said Mrs. Rorke Tuesday afternoon as she sipped a dry Martini in the cocktail room of the Mayflower. She had come from New York to attend a meeting of American Trade Association executives, as its only woman director.

"Before colors were stabilized, there was no way of knowing what shade would predominate in any season until the season was half over," she continued. "This meant the dress designers might blossom out with one color, shoemakers another, and milliners still another. Under that hit-and-miss system, shoe shops were likely to have stacks of gray slippers left on their shelves because women had bought brown dresses. And milliners were likely to gaze sadly at shopfuls of beautiful blue hats, wishing they were brown."

But now all this is changed. The hit-and-miss system has given way to a carefully devised color schedule whereby all American manufacturers can learn at least a year in advance what colors are going to be the rage. The wave of navy blue hats, bags, shoes, dresses, coats, and suits that inundated the Nation this spring was not a happy accident. It was the direct result of Margaret Hayden Rorke's decree, "Let's have navy blue."

Incidentally, she has chosen reddish browns, in mahogany and chestnut shades, for next fall. Already the cloth manufacturers, leather tanners, hosiery makers, and millinery designers are hard at work, turning out reddish browns. And the woman, who stocked up on navy blue this spring, can hold her wardrobe over for next year as Mrs. Rorke has booked navy blue for a return engagement in the spring of 1935.

According to Mrs. Rorke, she "just wandered into her job" as color-boss of the United States. A fiery exponent of woman suffrage, she had made many a speech for the cause; was the youngest speaker of any cnosequence. The suffrage battle won, Mrs. Rorke had returned to the life of a society dilettante when some friends who knew important textile manufacturers, suggested her for the position as managing director of the Textile Color Card Association of the United States, Inc. Soon after she had accepted the position, Mrs. Rorke began inventing and naming colors in addition to stabilizing and standarding old ones.

"I think I deserve some credit for keeping the memory of the good old days alive during prohibition," she laughed. "I kept liquor names before the public by bestowing them on colors."

She was referring to chartreuse green, sherry red, rum brown, creme de menthe green. Some of Mrs. Rorke's most successful colors have been named for flowers. Remember periwinkle? That was one of her inspirations.

At the present time she is engaged in standardizing the blue and red used in American flags. This will do away with those flags that lean toward pinkish or cerise reds or toward sapphire or cobalt blues.

As soon as she brings forth a new shade or standardizes an old one, foreign countries send for the color card.

"If those countries want to sell their goods in America, they must know what colors are being used over here," explained Mrs. Rorke. Japan is one of the most constant users of the textile color card produced by America's queen of color.

"Somebody is always wanting colors standardized," she declared. "America is certainly color conscious. I was rather surprised when dental floss manufacturers asked me to set a color for them. But strangest of all was the bakers' request for a certain shade of brown."

Mrs. Rorke has three children—all of them boys—but it is unlikely any of them will become color dictator of the United States. "Would you believe it, all three of them are color blind," laughed their mother.

Underwood & Underwood.

AMERICA, most color conscious country in the world, has an uncrowned queen in Margaret Hayden Rorke, above. She has the power to decree the color for everything from spring wardrobes to dental floss. In addition to standardizing and stabilizing colors, Mrs. Rorke invents new shades.

D. C. Federation To Form First Junior Group

THE DISTRICT Federation of Women's Clubs will hold a meeting to form the first local Junior Club to be under its supervision at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the Takoma Park Public Library.

• • • •

The District has been the only State federation not enlisting junior groups under its banner. The junior movement was organized 20 years ago by Mrs. Helen Cheney Kimberley, of Redlands, Calif. It was Mrs. Kimberley's idea that efficient clubwomen could be obtained only by forming junior sections and teaching girls the principles underlying government of the country and of themselves.

The work of this junior group will be along the same lines as the federation's—civic, charity and self-betterment.

• • • •

Mrs. Josephine Junkin Doggett, chairman of research and club service, will help to organize the group. Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, first vice president, will preside.

Institutions to Be Discussed.

MRS. C. M. JANSKY will open the meeting of the Columbia Chapter of the Delphians this morning at the Hamilton Hotel with a preparatory talk on "The Beginning of Our Institutions."

Other topics discussed will be: "The First Crusade," Mrs. H. H. Dawnes; "The Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem," Mrs. W. S. Graham; "Later Crusades," Mrs. Robert F. Mancill; "Rise of Free Cities," Mrs. A. R. Horn; "The Church of the Later Ages," Mrs. W. B. Nairn, and "Monastic Growth," Mrs. Otis Johnson.

At the luncheon after the meeting Mrs. J. H. Dellinger, president, will present Mrs. Mancill, former president, with the president's jewel.

Believe.

Don't Name Your Boy Junior Or Percy, Psychiatrist Advises

It's Too Much to Live Up to—or Own—and Frequently Serious Complexes Result; Girls Suffer From Mothers' Too Vivid Imaginations.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

WHENEVER the United States elects a President, an author christens a heroine with an unusual name, or an intrepid young man flies the ocean, innocent children pay for it.

Many parents, imbued with the idea they are gently leading their little sons and daughters into fields of greatness, name them for great personages, real or fictional. But it would be much wiser to name them for plain Uncle Bob or nice old Great-aunt Sarah, providing they must be named for somebody, says Dr. John Edward Lind, psychiarist on the staff of St Elizabeth's Hospital.

Too Much for Them.

Dr. Lind, also on the staff of George Washington University, has found that children who bear names of the famous often sink under the responsibility.

"A boy named for a president, a famous general, a daring aviator, or any other distinguished man, usually grows up with the idea that he, too, is expected to become a hero," said Dr. Lind yesterday. "When he learns he isn't made of heroic stuff—and few of us are—then he is likely to give up entirely and become a less-than-average person."

"Juniors" are often similarly handicapped, the psychiatrist has noticed.

"If junior's father is a fine, upright gentleman, the boy sometimes gets the idea it is hopeless for him ever to be like him. So he becomes discouraged, thinks he is unworthy of his noble name, gradually develops an inferiority complex," said Dr. Lind.

"It works just as disastrously in the case of the son named for a no-account father," he continued. "The boy is inclined to think because he bears the same name, people will expect him to have the faults of his parent. And, so he, too, develops a feeling of inforiority."

Girls Suffer Too.

A girl is seldom discomfited by being named for her mother. She sometimes suffers, however, from her mother's unbridled imagination or intense admiration for fiction heroines.

Too much imagination results in such fanciful names as Rosebud, Heliotrope, Saffronetta, Vendelina. A girl christened with one of these elegant titles usually finds it painless during her youth. It is when Rosebud becomes a hefty housewife she wishes to heaven her mother had christened her Jane or Mary.

As for fiction heroines: probably the pace-setter for all time is Corelli's "Thelma." Scarcely had the book of that title been squeezed between "Lena Rivers" and "St. Elmo" on American bookshelves when little Thelmas all over the country began gurgling in their cradles.

"Today leading ladies in books have few namesakes, Dr. Lind has found.

"Probably because the modern heroine usually falls from grace before the end of the fifth chapter," chuckled the psychiatrist. "Mothers don't want their daughters to follow in her footsteps. But when fiction heroines possessed all the virtues and clung to them through thick and thin, their names were bestowed indiscriminately upon helpless girl infants."

Because writers have always been fairly conservative in christening book characters, their names seldom cause much embarrassment to their real-life owners. Most name trouble is caused by the flowery tastes or misguided sense of humor of parents.

"Girls who bear these fanciful names should ward off oversensitiveness by deliberately flaunting them," said Dr. Lind. "If they pretend they don't mind their ornate titles people will gradually learn to take them for granted."

Golden Eagle on a Ledge.

If your route takes you across the wide, eroded mesa country of New Mexico, the spirited little prairie falcon may be seen hurling himself down from a rock shelf high overhead, where his mate and young wait for him to bring them food. Still higher on a ledge of rock perhaps you may sight the bulky nest of the widely ranging golden eagle.

On reaching the natural fortresses of the Enchanted Mesa and Acoma, the white-patched forms of white-throated swifts that screech by with incredible speed may come to rest against the seamed faces of cliffs ready to harbor them.

A Disputed Swing.

A LOT OF PEOPLE will be sorry to see the Charles E. Parsons leaving for California Friday. The captain has been transferred to the Navy Yard on San Francisco Bay.

• • • •

The Parsons have been giving things right and left to friends and sometimes they've "crossed wires." Sunday afternoon, when the captain was offering 4-year-old Alice's garden swing to another youngster's father, pretty Madge Parsons broke in gently but firmly with——

"But I've heard you give that swing to a least four other fathers so far. Please——"

Think of the Listener.

OLGA SAMAROFF, in town recently, told how she lost the idea that adults who know nothing of music should study some instrument and become amateurs. It happened one summer in Bavaria.

• • • •

"Some charming young English folk, cultured and alert, were guests at the same small house," said Mme. Samaroff. "They had studied music and were real amateurs as far as training went but they treated music as though it was a good indoor sport to be indulged in on rainy days. Unfortunately, we had quite a long, rainy spell.

• • • •

"I kept saying to myself as I listened to their playing and singing—'now, really, this is fine and to be encouraged; it is admirable they should want to perform even though distressingly without talent.' However, I found myself going for long walks in the rain.

"After that summer I must admit I think one must consider the listeners who have to hear amateurs."

Golfing Is Now Family Affair

Brothers. Sisters, Mothers, Fathers Unite to Defeat Outsiders.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

THE OLDER and younger generations may have some differences of opinion, but they have one common ground—the golf course. In no other sport are family ties so publicly acknowledged and defended. Mother and daughter matches, father and son, sister and brother, cover the fairway.

Two ranking American golfers, Maureen Orcutt and Helen Hicks have met, each with a brother beside her. It is a spreading virus this family golf play, and presently it may include the in-laws.

Miss Orcutt and Miss Hicks, meeting singly, without benefit of brothers, have formed half of this country's quartet of leading women golfers. Virginia Van Vie and Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare are the others.

Now the quadrangle is about to become a triangle. Maureen Orcutt is going into politics, and whether or not she gives up golf completely, certainly enough of her time will be taken away from it so the other three will remain leading the competition this season.

One of the first indications of where the wind was blowing came with Miss Orcutt's default in the North-South fixture, in which she would have been defending champion as she has held the title for three straight years.

She announces she will be a candidate for one of the five nominations for assemblyman of Bergen County, N. J.

NICE-LOOKING girls like this one are swarming over spring fairways, frequently in company with a father, uncle or brother. For golf has become quite a family thing. Maureen Olcott and Helen Hicks and respective brothers have had golfing battles royal.

Jane Eyre's Man, Rochester, Towers Moodily in Memory Above Today's Fiction Heroes

By Malvina Lindsay,

THE BRONTE SISTERS are back—this time behind the footlights—and some modern dramatic critics profess to be bored by them.

Playwrights have followed biographers in exploring the somber lives of the Haworth spinsters. London had a deluge of Bronte plays last season; New York recently had one and may have another. There is no escaping the Brontes, complain the play reviewers.

What the slightly dish watery Bronte plays need is the vitalizing presence of Rochester. Play producers are overlooking an opportunity in not bringing him to life to quicken the jaded hearts of modern matinee goers.

And yet, how could he be brought back to life—he who is still so robustly living? Who could be a more real and disturbing presence to every woman who has read "Jane Eyre" than the sardonic passionate master of Thornfield Hall?

He'll Never Be Eclipsed.

Literary heroes may come and go, but it is doubtful if Rochester will ever be eclipsed. One of his closest rivals of recent years was "The Virginian," and now in the perspective of distance the romantic cowboy of Owen Wister's tale grows misty. Even the Sheik of a more recent era is only a wraith.

But not Rochester. He still towers in memory, fiery and compelling. His flashing eyes, his moody brows, his proud carriage (especially on horseback) continue—and will always continue—to thrill feminine readers. Beside him today's fictional moon calves and Pans seem strangely inept.

What has been the source of Rochester's power with women? Not his romantic set-up, which was the usual one of the time, and which included a dissipated past, an air of mystery, the manners of a gentleman, and a mellow, powerful bass voice. Not his fine technique of love-making, for he was ironical and often cruel with women. Certainly not his disposition, for he was self-willed, bad-tempered and morose.

Perhaps if it was any one thing it was his lustiness of body and spirit. When he appeared on the literary scene all other characters paled. Ah, breathed the spectators with relief, here is a man who will take charge of things! Here is a man who will never be felled!

The Symbol of Protection.

To women readers as well as to the slain mousey governess, Jane Eyre, he was the symbol of protective power. It was the old knighthood formula of strength plus tenderness that Charlotte Bronte used, but she managed to make her hero so vital that his strength carried conviction.

No doubt is was inevitable that poor Charlotte, who for years was burdened with the support of her alcoholic brother, Bramwell, should have given to women readers of successive generations a man who was strong. No doubt it was inevitable that women learning through experience that men in the flesh were no stronger than themselves, should have turned to Rochester.

"Scribbling spinsters," one dramatic critic has called the Bronte sisters. Perhaps so. Judged by certain literary standards, "Jane Eyre" has its weaknesses. But—there remains Rochester. As a literary creation he will never cease to breathe so long as women read. Weird, impossible person that he may be, you can not if you are a woman forego his power. Not to have fallen in love with Rochester at least once in life is to have missed a great romantic experience.

Old Figures Can Be Swapped For Streamline 1934 Models

Revealing What?

Bathing suits are bound to be revealing. But the question is, revealing what? Silk frocks have a way of clinging. The idea is to give them something worthwhile to cling to.

The whys are obvious. And the hows are numerous.

There are common-sense methods galore. Tramp, tramp, tramp, the girls are marching. Don't be content to merely keep the song in mind. Put it to immediate practice. Get out under that blue sky and walk. Walk with a spring, a brisk stride.

Dieting? That's an excellent idea! Not on lemon juice and soda crackers, nor whipped cream and sweetmeats. But in the easiest, most sensible, most practical way in the world. Eat, eat anything you like. But don't eat quite as much as the appetite calls for.

The reward? Figure it out!

Spring Purses Bright and Gay; Fabric Popular

IN THE spring other things than men's fancies turn light. One of these is handbags. For while in winter they are demure and self-effacing, when warm weather comes they appear in gay colors and strange fabrics.

This year handbags are especially light-hearted and unconventional; they're appearing in everything from stitched taffeta to checked gingham and red oilcloth.

Even the long-accepted white pocketbook is a little gayer. Many have checked gingham linings or are trimmed in bright colors. These have red, green or blue handles, bases and straps. Some are decorated more simply with initials in colors.

Daniel Frohman, Here for Actors' Fund Benefit, Foresees Recovery of Theater

Noted Manager Of Many Stars Spreads Cheer

Is Dean of Native Theater; 'Rothschild's' Premiere; Theater Chat.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

To a true lover of the theater there is nothing more inspiriting or more stimulating than a few moments' conversation with Daniel Frohman.

DANIEL FROHMAN.

When an old acquaintanceship was renewed yesterday afternoon in the temporary office of the Actors' Fund of America, in the Munsey Building, this venerable dean of the American theater, at the age of 84, manifested more enthusiasm over the future outlook of the stage, a livelier interest in contemporary events in the playhouse and a keener insight into the problems of the profession than anyone half his age I have met in a month of blue moons.

His primary interest at the moment, of course, is the Actors' Fund Benefit, which he is sponsoring in the National Theater next Sunday night, May 6, for the financial reenforcement of a pet project to which he has devoted 52 years of his active life in the theater and among its people. Apart from this, however, Mr. Frohman, the last survivor of three distinguished brothers, all of whom chose the theater as their life work, is alert to every ramification of "show business."

Sees Revival of "Road."

Like the executives of the Theater Guild who were here last week, Mr. Frohman believes "the road" can be revived to the extent that profitable patronage eagerly awaits the coming to the larger cities of the country of worthwhile plays enacted by stars of the first rank. This he feels has been proved by Katharine Cornell, Walter Hampden, Ina Claire, certain of the Guild plays and a considerable list of other attractions that deserve to be included in the first flight.

There is, of course, no hope for the return of a 40-week season of one-night stands. The existence of this sort of a "road" was only possible when managers could send out "second" companies of established metropolitan successes. The motion picture has definitely put an end to all that. The cinema penetrates to every community without the necessity of foisting off "second" Norma Shearers, Janet Gaynors, Leslie Howards, Maurice Chevaliers or George Arlisses.

Had Hand in Movies.

While Mr. Frohman's first love is unequivocally the living theater, he has no crow to pick with the movies. He couldn't well have, for it was he who succored them when it seemed likely that they might never grow into the colossal thing they have since become.

That was back in 1913, when he formed an alliance with Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, and made available to him all of the Frohman plays and stars and thus brought into being the "Famous Players" company that was afterward hyphenated with "Lasky" to make "Famous Players-Lasky," which, in turn, finally grew into Paramount as it is at present constituted.

One suspects that Uncle Daniel derives as much secret pride and pleasure from the consummation of this coup in a day when the movies were scorned by the legitimate theater, as he does from any triumph that ever was achieved upon the stage of his Lyceum Theater or his brother, Charles Frohman's Empire.

But today he looks forward to the time when Ethel Barrymore, Laurette Taylor, Elsie Ferguson, Effie Shannon, Alison Skipworth and scores more whom he used to keep under his protective wing, all will have worthy plays and participate in the great, inevitable renaissance of the legitimate stage.

To hear him discuss these topics is to have the whole panorama of the history of the American theater unfold before the mind's eye. It is an experience to be cherished.

Two Cities Left.

Concerning the forthcoming Actors' Fund benefit, Mr. Frohman points out that Washington and New York are the only two remaining cities in which these performances, so vital to the upkeep of one of America's most worthy charities can be produced. Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, where benefits in bygone years were successfully presented, all have had to be abandoned because of the insuperable competition of the motion pictures.

In the larger cities the preponderance of stars visible on the screens could not be offset by the number of stars Mr. Frohman was able to take to their stages for a single performance. Thus Washington becomes the sole city honored by the actors, away from their own precious Broadway.

Oddly, or perhaps not so oddly, Mr. Frohman seems less concerned about the advance ticket sale than he is about "putting on a good show." He feels that the Inaugural Actors' Fund Benefit staged in the Belasco on Sunday night, March 5, 1933, was a pretty swell show and no one who saw it but will agree with him. He plans to make next Sunday night's even better.

And when Daniel Frohman plans to do a thing, he does it.

It is a pleasure to report that Mr. Frohman at the age of 84—he was born in Sandusky, Ohio, August 22, 1850, so is only midway through his 84th year—is in fine spirits and the picture of health, considerably more robust, as a matter of fact, than upon the occasion of the last Actors' Fund Benefit here, a little over a year ago. He will remain in Washington until after the performance Sunday night, in which, incidentally, he will take an active part with Elsie Ferguson, who has deferred her return to England a full week in order to come to Washington for this especial occasion. May many more years of useful service and kindly helpfulness still be his. He is a grand gentleman.

The Nats' Good Job.

The more earnestly one contemplates in retrospect the season's inaugural of the National Theater Players—24 hours after the event, as this is written—the more he becomes convinced that Mr. Cochran's splendid company gave an uncommonly fine account of themselves i. their first performance of the opening bill, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Langner's "The Pursuit of Happiness."

When every member of a company acquits himself, or herself, so creditably as was the case Monday night, it is manifestly unjust to single out any one or two or three for special commendation, but it is an almost inescapable thought that Ruth Abbott and Roy Roberts, the new leading woman and leading man, Mrs. Hibbard and Kathryn Givney will linger long in the memory of those who saw them for particularly effective portrayals among a considerable gallery of expert protraitures.

The town was fairly abuzz yesterday with enthusiasm over Monday night's opening, so perhaps it is no wonder that when Panjandrum Steve Cochran stopped by the desk yesterday afternoon he was wearing a smile that made the cat that had just swallowed the canary look like a Greek mask of tragedy!

If the Players do not "get over" with a start like this week's, what you say we go out along the Pike somewhere and open a hot dog stand? Show business will be shot!

Reverting briefly to the Actors' Fund Benefit Sunday night, it may be of interest to know who a few of the most ardent supporters of this gala occasion are. Among those who have subscribed to the benefit fund by purchase of boxes or groups of seats are Mr. Davis Elkins, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the U. S. Supreme Court, Mrs. Charles J. Bell, Mrs. E. B. McLean, Frank B. Noyes, Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Marshall Field, Representative Sol Bloom, Senator Wagner, Hon. Fack Konitza, Minister from Albania; Mrs. C. C. Rumsey, Frank R. Jelleff, Representative Peyser, Representative Connery, Mrs. Emil Berliner and a long and constantly growing list of others of social, political and commercial importance. Tickets, by the way, are on sale at the National Theater box office and at the office of the Actors' Fund, Room 537, Munsey Building.

A Gala "Permeer."

A breathless courier brings word close to the hour of midnight that the premiere of Twentieth Century's production of "The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss, will be made an occasion of much red fire and hurrah at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday night.

"The House of Rothschild" is already being spoken of as a probable winner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award for 1934, and it is deemed fitting therefore that in honor of its first Washington presentation F street should be turned into a combination Broadway and Hollywood boulevard.

Two 100,000-watt searchlights will streak the heavens with light, the Loew's Theaters' Cadet Band will oom-pah themselves blue in the face before the screening gets under way, newsreel crews will record the event for posterity and next day's crowds and distinguished guests will be introduced over a public address system as they enter the theater.

Invitations are being mailed to the members of the President's Cabinet, the Diplomatic Corps and members of the Senate and House of Representatives as well as others of distinction among Washington's permanent and transient residents.

Cor. State and Van Buren!

Beauty and Talent on Screen

Adrienne Ames, left, recently concerned in a Hollywood matrimonial shuffle, who comes to the screen at Loew's Fox on Friday with W. C. Fields in "You're Telling Me," and, at right, charming Genevieve Tobin, popular on both stage and screen, who, beginning Thursday, will similarly share honors with Edward Everett Horton in "Uncertain Lady," on the silver sheet of the Rialto Theater.

Farmville Will Have New Shoe Factory

Farmville, Va., May 2 (AP).—A new industry has been assured this community, with word that the Craddock-Terry Co., Lynchburg shoe firm, intends to open a plant here.

Work has been started on remodeling a building, and within a few days the town will start a school for prospective shoe workers. All but the foreman will be local residents when the plant, which will employ 200, is opened.

Straight From the Studios

(Reproduced from yesterday's last edition.)

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, May 1.—Icicles were hanging all over the set yesterday when Arthur Lake visited Betty Furness at Radio Studios.

MIRIAM HOPKINS.

Reason? It had been reported in a New York paper that Betty is engaged to Edmund Sheedy, who has been considered the white-haired boy around Betty's house at calling hours, wanted to know. Hence the early morning hot-footing to the studio.

And the icicles still were far from melting yesterday afternoon, but it is rumored that hopes are entertained for an early thaw.

• • • •

King Vidor Follows Bed.

Poor King Vidor, all tired out as he was, had to chase his bed around the country last night.

It happened up at Chatsworth Park, where he is directing "Our Daily Bread." Vidor is using a sort of house on wheels as a dwelling while on location. During the day a too-busy workman on the set moved the automobile dwelling to a spot 300 yards from where it was supposed to be, so when King wanted to go to bed he couldn't find any bed. It was only after a trek of half a mile and a search under all the oak trees that he finally found his perambulating bedroom and gratefully hopped in.

Weary Willie Powell.

William Powell was a little weary after many long dialogue scenes for "The Thin Man," so he retired to a far end of the stage for a rest on a day couch. A few minutes later Director Van Dyke needed Powell but only his voice, for a sound track. "Take my voice, but let me rest," Powell pleaded from his couch.

So Myrna Loy, Maureen O'Sullivan, Van Dyke and others picked up Powell's couch and carried both Powell and his voice to the microphone.

• • • •

Bing Hurts His Thumb.

Bing Crosby had to knock out three rivals in "She Loves Me Not" yesterday. Warren Hymer was one of the rivals. Bing let fly and Hymer went down, Crosby having hit a little harder than he intended.

"Oh, my," wailed Bing. "I didn't mean to hit so hard."

But Crosby's good right thumb began to swell alarmingly, and he found he had sprained it badly.

• • • •

Heard on The Boulevard.

Miriam Hopkins moving around on crutches, and unable to return to the studio before a fortnight, due to her broken ankle . . . Irvin S. Cobb lunching at the Cafe de Paris with his daughter Elizabeth, Nancy Carroll and Lillian Bond.

Said one of the extra girls to Hugh Enfield on the set: "All my life I've been saving my kisses for a man like you." The obliging Enfield replied: "Then, girlie, prepare to lose the savings of a lifetime!"

Charlie Butterworth observes that he once knew an honest grafter—he was a tree surgeon.

Frank Craven buying a home in Beverly Hills . . . Glenda Farrell, Robert Riskin and Mr. and Mrs. Zeppo Marx playing tennis at the Los Angeles Tennis Club . . . Since betting on Clark Gable's horse the last time it raced at Agua Caliente, Stuart Erwin has come to the conclusion that racing in Mexico is practically at a standstill . . . Mae West receiving a letter from a St. Paul, Minn., high school boy, stating he has 113 pictures of her, but declaring that he thinks the 13 is an unlucky number, and will she please send him one more.

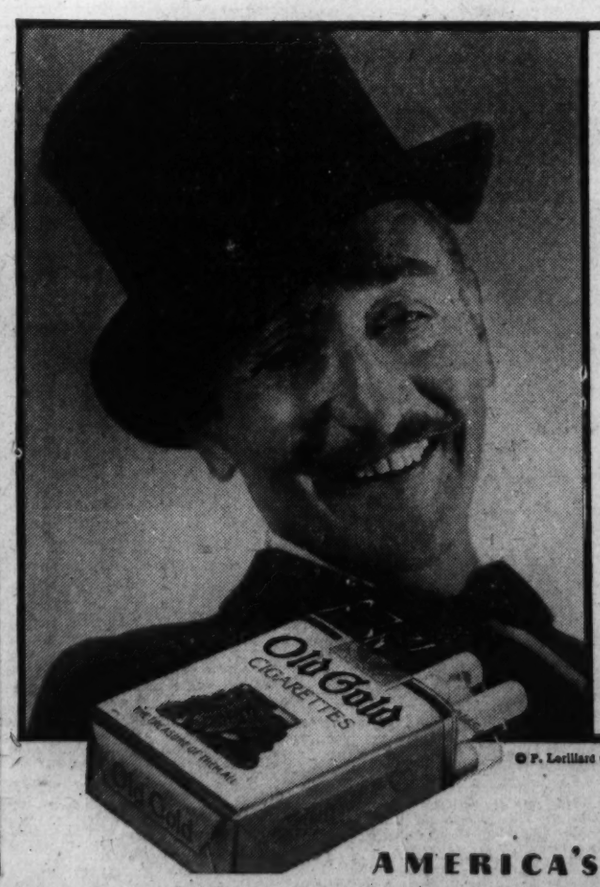
[OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1928]



Dear Mr. Menjou:—

As you know, there are many interesting arguments in the cigarette advertisements. But, after all, the proof of a cigarette, like a pudding, is in how it tastes.

We could tell you that Old Gold tobacco is picked from the heart of the stalk (and we did tell you that years ago). We could tell you that it's picked sun-ripened . . . and then aged to mellow perfection. So rich in natural flavor it needs no artificial flavoring.

But are WORDS important, when Old Gold gives you everything you like in a cigarette, including exceptional throat-ease?

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.

P. S.—The net of it, Mr. Menjou, is simply this: No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure . . . (No artificial flavoring).

Shenandoah Apple Fete Opens Today

Carnival Atmosphere Prevails, With Streets Gayly Decorated.

By C. B. Carr.

Winchester, Va., May 2 (Spl.).—With streets decorated in gay pink, green and white and citizens ready to welcome 160,000 visitors, Winchester tonight stood ready for the opening of the eleventh Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival here tomorrow.

As each hour passed, tourist homes and hotels were increasingly taxed to accommodate the vanguard of visitors who will be on hand early tomorrow for the initial festivities. Visitors poured in by bus, auto and train. Fakirs of every kind were already on hand this afternoon and had erected stands all over the city for the sale of everything from gas-filled balloons to pink lemonade.

Balmy weather this week has brought out the apple blossoms and the weather man predicts that both days of the fete—tomorrow and Friday—will have warm weather and clear skies.

Blossoms Radiant.

The festival will open tomorrow at 10 a. m. when 3,000 school children parade in "The Trail of Human Blossoms." The children will be from the schools of Frederick County. Pupils and teachers have spent the past several weeks preparing costumes depicting spring time.

Tomorrow afternoon, the first day's program will reach its climax with the coronation of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, internationally known horsewoman, as Queen Shenandoah XI. The coronation will take place on the esplanade of Handley High School, overlooking a natural amphitheater, where a crowd of 25,000 is expected to view the ceremonies.

Surrounded by a court of 29 princesses from as many girls' schools of Virginia, District of Columbia, Maryland and West Virginia, Mrs. Whitney will have the time-honored crown of the festival placed on her head by Lewis Douglas, director of the Federal budget, Washington.

Cavalry on Hand.

Troop 7, Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, with Capt. L. K. Truscott commanding, arrived in Winchester this afternoon and pitched camp at the Winchester Fair Grounds. While in camp here the cavalrymen expect to give exhibition drills, but their major function at the festival will be to act as military escort to her majesty, Queen Shenandoah XI.

A special military escort from Shenandoah Valley Academy and Staunton Military Academy will surround the court. The Glee Club of Harrisonburg State Teachers' College will chant anthems as the queen-elect presents herself to her "subjects" for coronation. The coronation rites will be from the ancient aurelian and Anglo-Saxon, translated into modern English by the Rev. Dr. S. L. Flickinger, Winchester.

Eleven hundred pupils of Winchester public schools under the direction of Garland R. Quarles, superintendent of schools, will honor the newly-crowned queen with a pageant, "The Spirit of the Years."

At 4:30 p. m. tomorrow there will be an aerial show at Admiral Byrd Airport for the entertainment of visitors. At 5 p. m., more than a score of bands here to participate in the fete will play.

Tomorrow evening, Winchester firemen will be hosts to a "Firemen's Parade" in which they expect many firemen from nearby sections to participate. At 8 p. m. the Harrisonburg State Teachers College Glee Club will present a concert in Handley High School auditorium and at 8:30 p. m., Robert Y. Conrad Post, American Legion, is sponsoring a boxing match in City Hall auditorium.

Queen's Reception.

At 9 p. m. Queen Shenandoah XI will formerly receive her court at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Russell.

The program for Friday:

11 a. m.—Pageant, "The Spirit of the Years," in Handley High School stadium.

12:30 p. m.—Reception and luncheon to Queen Shenandoah and her court at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Baker.

4:30 p. m.—Aerial show at Admiral Byrd Airport.

9:30 p. m.—Queen's Ball in Shenandoah Valley Academy.

1,000 Are Due For University School Contests

Literary, Athletic Events Will Be Staged May 11-12.

Charlottesville, Va., May 2 (Spl.).—Nearly 1,000 Virginia high school students and officials are expected at the University of Virginia May 11 and 12 for the annual State literary and athletic contests.

Charles H. Kauffmann, executive secretary of the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League, today announced that entries have closed and plans are being completed for the various competitions.

Public high schools compete in three classes. All having a student body of 700 or over are grouped in class A. Those having an enrollment of more than 150 and less than 750 are placed in class B, and those of less than 150 form the class C schools.

A plaque is awarded the school in each class acquiring the greatest number of points in contests held during the school year and at the State meet. Each individual winner receives the insignia of the league.

Athletic championships will be held for both private and public high schools in tennis and track. Nearly 250 boys will compete in the State championship track meet which will be held on Lambeth Field May 12.

All of the boys and girls entered in the speaking, spelling, reading and debating contests are district or school winners. Elimination contests have been completed all over the State.

One of the features will be a one-act play contest sponsored by the McIntire School of Fine Arts and the Virginia Players. About 20 of these plays will be enacted and a winner will be selected on the basis of its merit and presentation.

Chain Store Tax Test Up Today

Fredericksburg Statute Will Be Attacked in U. S. Court.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 2 (Spl.).—The validity of what is known as the Fredericksburg "chain store tax" will be tested tomorrow in the United States District Court in Richmond.

Judge Luther B. Way will preside over the hearing of proceedings based on the suit filed more than a year ago by the Sanitary Grocery Co. against the City of Fredericksburg, contesting the legality of the so-called "chain store tax" of $250 each on every store or mercantile establishment in excess of one "under the same general management, supervision or ownership."

Following several long and heated sessions, the tax ordinance was adopted by the city council in December, 1932.

In the suit challenging the validity of the special tax, the Sanitary Grocery Co. declares it "unconstitutional, illegal and void" as well as "partial, unreasonable, confiscatory, arbitrary, discriminatory and unequal" and "a clear and hostile discrimination against a selected body of taxpayers."

Sense of Duty.

We have our daily chores to do, they will not be denied; and sometimes, feeling tired and blue, we'd like to let them slide. We'd like to rest beneath a tree and dream of babbling brooks, where trout, in groups of five or three, are eager for the hooks. Perhaps we have an angry boil that causes bitter pain, and things resembling honest toil we look on with disdain. Perhaps we've had distressing news concerning bonds and stocks, and so we say, "Why dust the pews and wind the 8-day clocks? Why go the same old dreary round when we are feeling stale, our whiskers dragging on the ground—what shall it all avail?" And then the voice of duty tells its age-old rigmarole, and conscience, like a spur, impels the tired and jaded soul. A man at eve in comfort basks, but finds it little fun, if he's neglected useful tasks he surely should have done. And so we do our tiresome chores when we would let them slide; we fashion handsome cellar doors, three feet, six inches wide. We fill with ink the fountain pens that all went dry today, and round up all the missing hens that like to lay astray. The well-known voice of duty speeds the man who's full of ache; and so the old world's work proceeds, goes on without a break.

Derby Field Foreseen as Best Ever

Dan Sabath, Injured, Is Only Withdrawal of Last Few Days.

Cavalcade, Peace Chance Ready; Bazaar Shows Plenty in Trial.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 2 (AP).—If Lady Luck hovers over the Churchill Downs track for just three more days, the best Kentucky Derby field from the standpoint of both quality and speed will face the barrier Saturday, and no scoffers will dare to remark that the Derby was run "in trotting horse time."

Mrs. I. D. Sloane's record-breaking Cavalcade had fully recovered today from the nervousness caused by his train ride to Kentucky, and Joseph E. Widener's Peace Chance, which broke the track record for a mile here yesterday, cooled out nicely after the race, and trainer Pete Coyne said only a champion of champions would be able to defeat his charge in the $30,000 added stakes.

Dan Sabath Injured.

The only mishap of the late training season eliminated a dark horse from the Derby field. Albert Sabath's Dan Sabath ruptured a tendon sheath in yesterday's preparation purse, and was declared out. It is a remarkable year when only one probable starter goes lame during the late conditioning, so Lady Luck has done her part so far.

Western punters chortled with joy when Col. E. R. Bradley's Bazaar, the English-bred filly, worked the full Derby route of a mile and a quarter in 2:04 4-5 today, handily, and remarked that the 2:04 1-5 recorded by Mrs. Payne Whitney's Spy Hill before leaving the East was nothing to run an abnormal temperature over.

Col. Bradley, however, said he was not pleased by Bazaar's showing, since his timing showed she ran the last quarter in only 27 seconds. Other clockers said the colonel was "always belittling," as their watches caught the last quarter in two-fifths faster.

Riskulus in Fast Trial.

Norman W. Church's Riskulus, bearing the hopes of the Far West, worked the Derby distance in 2:06 1-5, with full Derby weight up, handily. Three Eastern threats also worked the route, J. H. Loucheim's Speedmore in 2:09 3-5, pulled up; Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Singing Wood in 2:10 3-5, easily, and Mrs. Frank J. Heller's Agarian in 2:12 1-5, breezing.

Today's program at Churchhill Downs in reality was featured by the final Derby prep of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery. The Eastern threat went the full Derby route in 2:08 flat between the second and third races. With Jockey J. Bejishak up, he stepped a fine quarter in 0:23 2-5, and the half in 0:50. Trainer Bud Stotler was waving him down at this point, and the son of Display was under strong restraint to reach the three-quarters in 1:16 4-5, and the mile in 1:43 3-5. At this point Rejshak gave his mount his head and he responded with a sparkling last-quarter burst of speed of 0:24 2-5. Mr. Vanderbilt witnessed the trial from the trainer's platform in the center field.

B. & O. Nine Completes Interstate Loop Roster

Cumberland, Md., May 2 (Spl.).—Assurance that the Interstate Baseball League will start the season with eight teams came last night when the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Club, of this city, announced that it had decided to remain in the circuit.

Acquisition of Joe Hartman, right-hand pitcher, and several other players buoyed the hopes of the railroaders, whose final decision was to retain their league franchise.

Manager Leo Bartlik's B. & O. tossers will inaugurate their league campaign next Sunday at South End Park, when they cross bats with the Celanese A. A. It will be "Booster" day for the B. & O.

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP).—Madison Square Garden, the sports palace Tex Rickard built, returned today to the control of one of his earliest associates, Col. John S. Hammond, the man who fought hardest—and for years lost the battle—for continuance of the policies of the great promoter.

Hammond announced today that with the exception of minor legal details he and his unnamed associates had bought the stock interests of Richard F. Hoyt and Hayden, Stone Co., the bankers who underwrote Rickard's $7,000,000 venture nine years ago. The deal was reported to have involved the transfer of 112,000 shares of stock at $7 per share, slightly above the market value.

Kilpatrick Remains.

At the same time the white-haired colonel, a West Point graduate who first met Rickard when they were both interested in cattle in Argentina, announced that while he would become chairman of the Garden board of directors, and return to the presidency of the New York Rangers, Col. John R. Kilpatrick would remain as president of the corporation. New directors will join the board. There will be no changes, at present, in the administration of the Garden boxing affairs, now in the hands of Jimmy Johnston.

It was evident, however, that Hammond, who has fought ceaselessly for control of the Garden, will direct its policies in every way.

When Rickard sought backing for the building of the Garden, Hammond, a wealthy man, was first to join him. He sold Tex on the idea of professional hockey, organized the first team here, and became president of the Rangers, several times winner of the Stanley Cup, emblem of the world championship.

Is Hockey Fan.

At the time of Rickard's death in 1929, Hammond owned a large block of stock in the Garden, but lacked control. He clashed constantly with the banking interests in control, and the increasing conflict resulted in his resignation as president of the hockey club over a year ago. Lester Patrick, manager of the team, succeeded him. He said when he left the Garden then that he would be back, and he finally made that statement good today.

A thorough reorganization of the hockey team is forecast, for Col. Hammond is feverish over the sport. Patrick will be retained as manager of the Rangers.

Roesch Wins Tournament Medal

73 Withstands Attempts of Second-Day Field; 75 by J. Shorey.

FRANK ROESCH, former District champion, was declared the medal winner in the Washington Golf and Country Club invitation golf tournament yesterday after 100 additional entrants made a futile attempt to beat the 73 he registered on the opening day of the qualifying round Tuesday.

Only one other golfer from the pack yesterday came within 2 shots of tying his 18-hole card. Hhe was John Shorey, of Kenwood, runner-up to Harry Pitt in the recent Belle Haven invitation tournament. Shorey was locked in a tie for the runner-up post with Capt. K. J. Fielder, of Army and Navy; Ralph Fowler, of Washington, and M. Parker Nolan, of Indian Spring, who scored their 75s Tuesday.

Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood, putting for birdies on six on the last nine holes, wound up with 76, identical figures posted by Jimmy Drain, of the home club. Harry Pitt qualified for the title flight with a 76, but Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, continued to be erratic with his driving and scored a 79—1 shot too many. Gene Vinson, of Manor, former Mississippi star, scored an 80.

Late in the evening, eight players had to play off for the last two positions, and Miller B. Stevinson, Columbia, scored a birdie 3 on the first hole, and H. H. Blair, Washington, a par 4, to win the places.

Churchill Feature Is Won by Pancoast

Churchill Downs Race Track, May 2 (AP).—A. B. Gallaher's good overnighter, Pancoast, won the Seelbach Hotel Purse, feature of a mediocre program here today, in a common canter. At the end of the six and a half furlongs he was easing up, two lengths in front of M. Goldblatt's Gilbert Elston and the Elmtree Stable's March King. The winner set his own pace and was never in danger, paying his backers $4.60 for $2.

Roosevelt Golfers Tourists in Scotland

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 2 (AP).—Unable to get in their usual two rounds of golf because a local tournament was being played on the course, the United States Walker Cup Team today made a reverent pilgrimage to the graves of Scotland's golfing immortals in the ruins of mammoth old St. Andrews Cathedral.

Accompanied by Henry Gullen, secretary of the Royal and Ancient Club, and the wives of George T. Dunlap, jr., and Jack Westland, the team members first went to the grave of Andra Kirkaldy, veteran St. Andrews professional, who died a few days ago.

The party next visited the graves of Tom Morris, grand old man of golf, and his son, Tom. Between them the two won eight British open titles from 1861 through 1872. Johnny Goodman and Dunlap placed flowers on the graves.

Flowers also were placed on the grave of Allan Robertson, one-time Scottish champion, who died in 1859 and on whose headstone is the inscription "Far and True."

The party also visited St. Andrew's Castle, in whose dungeons religious prisoners were confined centuries ago.

As the party trudged back over the old course to their hotel, several complained of being tired, but when Goodman discovered the tournament was over and had talked the starter into letting him play a round their weariness was quickly forgotten. He, Lawson Little and Westland grabbed their clubs and went out on the course. The older members of the party smiled tolerantly and sought easy chairs.

"I never saw boys go as crazy over a course as these youngsters have over St. Andrews," Ouimet said.

He is greatly pleased that they have over St. Andrew's," Ouimet for the coming matches with the British May 11 and 12.

Indians, Here Today, Face Thomas

McColl May Return to Nats if He Pitches Well Sunday.

By Frank H. Young.

WALTER JOHNSON and his Cleveland Indians drifted into town yesterday. The Tribe manager went to his Alta Vista home to milk the cow and mow the lawn, but the other members of the party, not having seen any baseball for some time, hustled out to Griffith Stadium to see the Nats and Yankees perform.

The Indians make their season debut here against the Nats this afternoon and Johnson is authority for the statement that he has a mighty good team. "I've got the best mound staff any team in the league has had in several years," Walter opined. "The only trouble is that I'm unable to give the boys the necessary work they need. For instance, I've got Oral Hildebrand, Lloyd Brown and Monte Pearson all crying for a chance to start against the Nats tomorrow. I'll probably use Hildebrand, as he has been quite effective against them." Al Thomas, by the way, will draw the box assignment from Manager Joe Cronin.

Ferrell Forgotten Man.

"I really don't know a thing about Wes Ferrell, except that he has been suspended," said Walter when the former's star name was mentioned. "Last fall, near the end of the season, he asked me did I consider him an outfielder or a pitcher. I told him that I was certain that he was no outfielder. That day, he took a long warm-up and looked like he had everything, but I don't know. Anyway, we're getting along very well without him."

Clark Griffith, Nat owner, last night wire Joe Engel at Chattanooga, asking him to start Pitcher Alec McColl against the Memphis Club Saturday. If the veteran rookie goes well in this game, Griffith will know that he has completely recovered from the arm operation necessary last winter and will bring him here pronto to help out Jack Russell when a right-handed relief hurler is needed.

Right now, Russell needs a rest, Crowder never was a good relief flinger, and Cronin apparently does not have much confidence in the youngsters, Mark Filley and Ed Linke, who, by the way, are having their hands full pitching to batters.

Buckholz Named To Boxing Body

Fred Buchholz, local restaurateur and hotel operator, was appointed as the second member of the District boxing commission yesterday. A graduate of the Georgetown University Law School, Buchholz is a native of Washington.

The new commissioner has played an active part in local sports for many years, particularly in duckpin bowling in which he has been represented by many outstanding teams. He has been an ardent boxing fan for the past decade, but admits frankly his interest has not led him behind the scenes of the fisticuffing industry.

"One thing certain," Buchholz said after his appointment yesterday, "Boxing here will be kept clean. We will not tolerate any crooks or racketeers in the business."

Georgetown 7-2 Winner Over Catholic U. Netmen

Georgetown's powerful tennis team pounced on Catholic University's racquet wielders for a 7-2 victory in their match yesterday on the Hilltop courts. Cook and Hefferman were the only Cardinal players to score. Cook's victory over Foote in three torrid sets featured the match.

Crowley (G) defeated Legrand, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3; Jacobs (G) defeated Jenus, 6—3, 6—4; Cook (C U) defeated Foote, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2; Hefferman (C U) defeated Henry, 9—7, 6—1; Casney (G) defeated Fitzsimmons, 6—1, 6—3; O'Connor (G) defeated Daly, 6—1, 6—2; Crowley and Sentel (G) defeated Hefferman and Legrand, 6—3, 6—4; Jacobs and Decker (G) defeated Fitzsimmons and Cook, 6—2, 1—6, 7—5; O'Connor and Casney (G) defeated Jenus and Daly, 6—0, 6—4.

Fungy in Open Trials.

Cumberland, Md., May 2 (Spl.). The Cumberland Country Club's new golf professional, Joe Fungy, is believed to be the only golfer in this section entered in a qualifying round of the national open tournament. He will compete at the Fox Chapel Country Club, near Pittsburg, Monday, May 14.

Qualifying rounds will be played in 21 other sections on the same date, with the National open carded for the Merion Cricket Club, Ardmore, Pa., June 7, 8 and 9. Entrants turning in low scores will qualify for the event.

Johnson City Wins.

Bristol, Va., May 2 (Spl.).—Johnson City Teachers College tennis teams defeated King College, 6 to 1, on the King courts here yesterday.

The King tennis teams will meet those of Lees-McRae College at Banner Elk, N. C., Friday afternoon.

Giants Lead On 6-5 Victory Over Dodgers

Homers by Ott and O'Doul Enable Terry's Crew to Overcome Rival's Lead.

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP).—Two home runs, the first by Mel Ott in the third and the other by Pinch Hitter Lefty O'Doul in the eighth, gave the New York Giants a 6-to-5 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers today and a clean sweep of the three-game series. The triumph also sent the world champions into the National leadership as the Cubs lost to the Pirates.

Ott hit his circuit drive, his sixth of the season, with Manager Bill Terry on base. O'Doul, batting for Travis Jackson with the Giants trailing by one run, crashed through with Terry and Ott perched on the sacks.

St. Louis Wins On Home Runs, 5-2

Detroit Loses on Blasts by Burns and Pepper.

Detroit, May 2 (AP).—Home runs by Burns and Pepper with men on the bases enabled the St. Louis Browns to trim Detroit, 5 to 2, in the series final here today. The result gave the Browns two of the three games played.

The Tigers took a one-run lead in the first inning, but could not hold it. Vic Sorrell's pitching weakened and the Browns got to him in the second. Clift doubled and Burns brought him home with a four-base clout.

Blaeholder went the route for the Browns, allowing seven scattered singles. Detroit called first on Auker and then Dowe to carry the pitching burden after Sorrell had been taken out for a pinch hitter.

Unbeaten Chase Me Wins Seventh Straight Race in First 1934 Appearance

Gelding Sets Own Pace In Test

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 2.—The Chase Me Follies, prominent in turf entertainment last year, had its first 1934 showing here today. The leading man did very well, too, defeating three fair rivals over the mile and 70 yards course. The big gelded son of Purchase, whose career led him to the show ring and hunt races before his owner, Mrs. John Bosley, jr., found that he was capable race track material, was credited with a three-quarter length victory over Chatmoss. This pair led Teralice and Larranaga across the finish line before some 8,000 enthusiasts.

Will Oppose Equipoise.

Experts were divided in their opinions on the showing of Chase Me, the horse that paraded to six straight victories last year and finished the 1933 campaign by walloping the best that Maryland could offer in the way of stake material. Some contend that Chase Me's colors will be lowered here on Saturday, when he is scheduled to partake of such opposition as Equipoise in the $5,000 added Dixie Handicap. True, Chase Me gets a 10-pound pull in the weights—120 to 130 for the Whitney ace—but many of those who know their horses contend that today's performance must be bettered by a wide margin if Mrs. Bosley's pet is to top the big-money winner.

While the chartmakers called Chase Me's victory as "handily," some horsemen contend that the gelding was "all out" at the finish, and that he would not have won had it not been for the fact that Jockey Burke was forced to pull up on Chatmoss when Chase Me bore over in the closing strides.

Sets Fast Pace.

Mrs. Bosley chose Earl Porter to ride Chase Me and the tiny youth did not appear capable of handling his big charge. At least, Chase Me ran to the first turn like a wild horse and set a terrific pace with the others chasing in the order in which they were to finish—Chatmoss, Teralice and Larranaga. Porter looked as if he was unable to retard the speed of Chase Me but Chatmoss was doing a bit of speeding too. The pair were lapped entering the far turn and then Porter let out what wraps he had on the big horse and he leaped away from Chatmoss.

Whether Porter rode an overconfident race in the stretch or whether Chase Me was tiring is a matter of opinion. However, the fact remains that Chase Me had a two-length lead at the sixteenth pole when Chatmoss suddenly shot up. Burke elected to go between Chase Me and the rail.

Blocks Chatmoss.

Chatmoss had his head up to Chase Me's saddle post when the gelding suddenly lunged to the left. Burke was forced to stand up in the saddle during the last few yards.

It might mean that Chase Me "ain't what he used to be." Saturday and Equipoise should produce the answer.

Rhadamanthus Always Leads.

Rhadamanthus, after running several disappointing races, led from start to finish in the opening race to score for the C. V. Whitney interests. Sonny Workman had the mount and rode a heady race, giving the son of Pennant a breather on the backstretch and then keeping him in front of the determined finish of Firelock. Banners Flying was third after a rough trip. The winner was a $7.90 mutuel.

The speedy Broadway Jones sent a gelded son, Justa Jones, to the post in the second race over the 4½-furlong course and provided the second straight win for Workman. Again the Washington rider was always ahead, getting home by a two-length margin over Ogle, which had a length the best of Sun Teaparty. Justa Jones was a lukewarm favorite and paid $6.90.

A rarity in steeplechase racing, a nose finish, marked the contesting of the Keystone, a 13-jump race. The Graf, from the barn of M. B. Metcalf, came again in the run from the final jump to nip Escapade, the favorite, at the finish line and pay a $43.80 mutuel. Alpheus, of the well-played Clark entry, was third, two lengths away.

McKinney Overconfident.

Rigan McKinney appeared to ride an overconfident race on Escapade. He let The Graf set the pace and moved ahead just before the last jump, but the long shot came again and McKinney's whipping could not keep Escapade in command. The veteran Spinach moved along in the first flight but dumped his rider at the ninth jump.

RHADAMANTHUS outran his field going to the first turn, was taken in hand when straightened into the back stretch, and steadied until challenged. He responded gamely, although tiring, and outstayed FIRELOCK under punishment. FIRELOCK, as usual slow to get going, secured racing room on the inside for the entire trip, and was wearing the winner down nearing the finish. BANNERS FLYING worked his way up stoutly in the last half-mile, and finished willingly. BIOGRAPHY moved up stoutly midway of the final turn, but weakened during the final drive. LEONIE went evenly. BLACK FALCON had no excuses. GITAPP broke slowly and lacked speed.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. The Mackenzie. For 3-year-olds. Start good, from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:55½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA JONES, $6.90, $3.80, $3.20; OGLE, $4.10, $3.20; SUN TEAPARTY, $7.50.

JUSTA JONES, quickest to get going, moved clear when entering the home stretch, and kept under mild pressure, held OGLE safe. Latter weaved his way into contention after breaking slowly, came to the outside, and closed with good courage. SUN TEAPARTY, inclined to bear out rounding the turn, finished on the inside during the stretch drive, but weakened steadily. KINDRED SPIRIT could not better his position under strong pressure. DILATE showed a good effort. STAR CHASE raced well. PORTER CALL had speed in spots. The others were unable to threaten the leaders.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000. Claiming handicap. The Keystone Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:18½. Winner, M. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE GRAF, $48.80, $12.10, $4.10; ESCAPADE, $4.00, $2.50; ALPHEUS, $2.60.

THE GRAF, fencing stoutly in the first mile and one-half, lost command at the twelfth fence when making a bad landing, came again when taken to the outside, and in a fast finish on the flat, was up in the last strides. ESCAPADE, reserved off the pace for the first mile, saved ground while approaching the leaders, took command at the twelfth fence when the pacemaker landed badly, but hung badly after the final jump. ALPHEUS, rated along outer mile and, finished with good courage when put to a drive. BAGATELLE was making up ground steadily in the late stages. ZERMATT was done early. SPINACH lost his rider at the ninth jump.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. The Rose Hill Manor. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:50½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIPS, $6.20, $3.30, $2.60; DAWNCHILD, $3.30, $2.70; LAURETTA NASH, $4.70.

CHIPS, beginning quickly, was taken under slight restraint when reaching the back stretch, withstood keen opposition in the early stages, and then continued strongly when vigorously shaken up. DAWNCHILD, a keen factor from the start, made repeated efforts, but was not good enough. LAURETTA NASH, shuffled back midway of the back stretch when in tight quarters, recovered gamely, and finished with good courage. MISS GLACE came through on the inside in the last half-mile, and was going willingly at the end. APPOMATTOX was rushed off his feet after breaking slowly, and he faltered when the real test came. TRIOLET had early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,000. The Strathmore Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:19. Off at 4:20. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHASE ME, $3.00, $2.40, out; CHATMOSS, $3.00, out; TERALICE, out.

CHASE ME, full of run, and making the early pace under sufferance, drew clear midway of the final turn, but had to be shaken up approaching the finish when challenged by CHATMOSS, following in closing gallop of the winner, came again in the closing furlong, but was badly blocked by the winner when finishing on the inside at the end. TERALICE went nicely placed, and showed a good effort. LARRANAGA could not better his position at any stage.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won galloping; place, driving. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:54½. Winner, P. Ratti's b. f. CRAZY JANE sprinted into a commanding lead soon after the start, and was never menaced thereafter. LAZI CANTER worked his way up steadily, but could not threaten the winner. CHATTERDOO raced forwardly for the entire trip, but weakened in the final drive. BROWN WISDOM was never able to improve his position. BIFF was outrun all the way. He came wide in the final stages. KING'S PLEASURE, hustled hard to take command, displayed good speed while saving ground, and was going nicely at the end. OUR TIME, closest to the winner at all stages, was unable to threaten seriously when hard urged. CUBIST forced the pace from the beginning, closed with good courage. WHOA BACK was shuffled back leaving the back stretch. He closed willingly when securing racing room on the outside. KURDAIR showed speed in the opening furlong. Ruble Hurls Well Against Tars; Terps Collect Ten Safeties.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 2 (Spl.).—Steady fielding in the pinches, behind the effective pitching of Ruble, big right-hander, enabled University of Maryland to defeat the Annapolis Midshipmen in their annual baseball game today, 8 to 3.

The Old Liners developed a hard-hitting punch in the early innings to pile up their score, three of their ten safe drives being triples poled out by Love, Buscher and McAboy. Buscher's drive to deep center field was labeled an easy homer, but he st

Stocks Retreat 1.7 Points in Offerings Rush

New York, May 2 (AP).—Stocks retired to the lowest closing average price since mid-January today. With a few exceptions the market was reasonably steady until the last hour when offerings developed larger volume, forcing a general retreat. Net losses ranged from fractions to 3 points.

The break in stocks resulted from no news of spontaneous origin, but seemed rather to have been caused by an accumulation of factors, including seasonal fluctuations in business which, as they tend downward, will be in contrast to the sweeping advance of a year ago.

Volume was light until the late selling; for the five hours it amounted to 1,408,784 shares.

Weakness in Phones.

Weakness in American Telephone, which lost more than 3 points net, was a sore spot all day and apparently was a repercussion of the State Public Service Commission's decision to start a rate case against the Bell system's largest operating subsidiary, New York Telephone.

U. S. Smelting, Sears-Roebuck, Santa Fe, U. S. Rubber preferred, Johns-Manville and Western Union were other substantial losers. General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Steel, American Can, Pennsylvania and North America sagged approximately a point.

Spiegel-May-Stern flopped around 10 when it was reported that the stock exchange business conduct committee was looking into recent transactions in the shares; the loss was reduced to 8¼ net.

Radio Shares Cheered.

Radio Corporation issues were cheered by the company's first quarter net income and by intimations that dividend action on the "A" preferred would be considered if the improvement were maintained. Gold mining shares firmed, for no immediately discernible reason. A tabulation of the market's performanc showed 566 declines and 106 advances.

Steel output continues to expand, having risen 2 points to 58 per cent of capacity. This estimate by Iron Age closely approximates last year's high and there is talk of a further gain. However, the review says there are indications that the automobile manufacturers "are commencing to be distrubed by indications that their price boosts have retarded sales," and if this is the case takings of automotive steel will probably diminish.

Electric power production last week was under the previous week, though higher than a year ago by a substantial margin. Several large railroads handled heavier freight traffic last week, but the gains over 1933 are beginning to narrow as comparisons are made with the revival then occurring. The same way be true of department store sales.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Among Possible Uses of Stabilization Fund Is Driving Pounds Sterling Higher in Attempt to Support Basic Commodity Prices.

By Ralph West Robey.

Probable motives for the "creation" of a stabilization fund of $1,800,000,000 have been rather well explored in the news accounts of the action. Necessarily they run along two lines. First is that the fund is to be used for operation in the foreign exchange market, to prevent a loss of gold; secondly, that it will be available to support the Government bond market should such action become desirable. The reason for offering these possible explanations is that it is only in these two fields that the fund may be used.

From the point of view of appraising the outlook, however, it must be obvious that it is not sufficient merely to say that such operations may be at the bottom of the action. What we need to know is what line of thought has been running through the minds of Administration leaders that has caused them to conclude that it is wise to make the fund available. Or more accurately, what do Administration leaders see ahead that has convinced them they need a mechanism the operations of which may be kept completely secret.

One Would Like to Say Acting Is More Routine.

The reply that one would like to be able to make to such queries is that the Administration sees nothing that makes it think a secret fund may become desirable. Rather, that the action simply is the result of the fact that the funds were set aside from the gold "profits" and that the current move is nothing more than the routine completion of a mechanism to enable the Government to continue its present monetary policy. Such a view would mean that no significance of any kind is to be attached to the step that has been taken to put all operations of this fund beyond public vision.

This explanation, nevertheless, has comparatively little to say for it. One cannot help, therefore, but speculate on what the Administration may be planning. When one approaches the problem from this point of view two possibilities immediately stand out.

First is operation in the market for pounds sterling with a view of getting a higher quotation for this currency. The purpose of such operation—of having a higher quotation for pounds sterling—would be to help various of our basic commodities, cotton and wheat especially. The underlying reasoning for such action would be that by and large having the dollar depreciate in terms of sterling has been more effective than anything else in raising the prices of these commodities. Since par of exchange for sterling is $8.24, this action would not involve any necessary change in the prices for gold standard currencies—that is, they need not advance to the point where we must ship gold.

May Involve Further Action on Silver.

Second of the possible plans of the Administration is to do something further in our domestic monetary policy. Most likely in this particular would be "doing something for silver," say increasing the amount of it in our monetary system to a 30-to-70 ratio with gold. In this case the fund would be convenient because almost certainly any such move toward silver would weaken the Government bond market and support would be needed. Evidence that such weakness would occur was provided some days ago when the stories were running strongly in favor of silver. The market did not break, but it became decidedly ragged. If the Administration anticipated doing anything for silver, therefore, it merely is the part of wisdom to create as a first step a means for supporting the Government bond market.

There are, needless to say, still other possible plans that the Administration may have in mind. Perhaps some of them fit in with probabilities much better than the above. It may be, on the other hand, that all of them are the intellectual equivalents of looking under the bed. When a government makes a suspicious move, however, one can not eliminate suspicion from his interpretation.

Federal Bonds Capture Peaks; Others Decline

Heavy Sales in U. S. Loans Swell Turnover to $16,082,000.

New York, May 2 (AP).—The bond market today just about duplicated its performance of the previous session by pushing up U. S. Government securities to the highest levels of the past year or longer and, at the same time, lowering the quoted values of many secondary issues.

Although most other groups were relatively dull, expanded activity in the Federal section raised the total of transfers in all categories to $16,082,000, par value, against $13,275,000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate loans was off another two-tenths of a point at 87.

The turnover in Governments amounted to about $8,300,000 and twelve issues went into the "new high" class. Gains here ranged from 1-32d to 13-32ds of a point, with the Treasuries in greatest demand.

Treasury 3s got up to 100.4, the peak price for this issue since its appearance two and one-half years ago. They closed at 100.3. The new Federal Farm 3¼s and Home Owners 4s, listed in the Government section yesterday, advanced 7-32ds and 3-32ds, respectively.

The renewed popularity of Federal loans, notwithstanding their comparatively low yields, was attributed by dealers largely to the lessening of inflationary fears among investors and to the pressing need of idle capital to find safe employment even at small returns.

Various prime investment issues among the rails, utilities and industrials maintained a steady to firm tone. Small gains were recorded by some loans of American Telephone, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Consolidated Gas, National Steel, New Jersey Power, New Orleans Public Service, Northern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Losses of 1 to around 2 points were suffered by bonds of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Warner Bros., Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, Postal Telegraph, Portland General Electric, Paramount Publix, Nickel Plate, Missouri Pacific, International Telephone, International Hydro-electric, Great Northern, Erie, Chicago & Northwestern, St. Paul, Chesapeake Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, American Writing Paper and Alleghany Corporation.

The foreign division was again rather dull and irregular. German government 5½s and 7s rallied around a point each. French government 7s edged up to a record high at 180¾ on a few sales. Bonds of Argentina and Dutch East Indies sagged.

Curb's Prices Decline Under Selling Drive

Industrials, Heavy; Oils Narrow; Trading Cut to 204,000 Shares.

New York, May 2 (AP).—Selling was resumed on the curb exchange today and closing quotations represented declines of fractions to around 2 points. Industrials were heavy. Oils ruled narrow, while some of the gold shares worked against the trend for fractional gains.

The market was dull in the morning. The trend turned downward shortly after the noon period and offerings increased in the final dealings. Transfers approximated 204,000 shares, compared with 229,000 yesterday.

Spiegel-May-Stern preferred lost 2 points in sympathy with heavy selling of the common stock on the big board. Hiram Walker and Natomas showed similar losses. Bunker Hill & Sullivan dropped 3½, but shares of Lake Shore, Hollinger, Pioneer Gold and Wright Hargreaves closed steady, to a point higher.

Recessions of sizable fractions to a point or more were suffered by Aluminum Co. of America, American Gas & Electric, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Electric Bond & Share, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Lynch Corporation, Newmont, Fisk Rubber, Waco Aircraft, National Container and Swift & Co.

U. S. Grain Exports Rise During Week

(Associated Press.)

Grain exports from the United States last week totaled 934,000 bushels against 555,000 bushels the previous week and 103,000 bushels during the corresponding week of last year.

Canadian grain exported last week from United States ports totaled 837,000 bushels against 640,000 last week, while exports of North American wheat flour were 55,000 barrels against 57,000 barrels.

Wool Market.

Boston, May 2 (A.P.) (United States Department of Agriculture).—The wool consumption report released by the Bureau of Census for the month of March showed that mills were consuming wool during the first quarter of the year much more rapidly than was indicated by sales of raw wool in the Boston market during that period. This appeared still to be the case for very little trading has occurred in the market. Isolated transactions indicated a fairly firm price level. For example, eight months Texas wool sold at an estimated scoured basis around 78 cents. Sample bags of good French combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags were taken by mills at 82@83 cents scoured basis.

Iron and Steel Exports Reach Peak Since '29

Iron and steel products exported from the United States in March reached the highest volume level for any month since July, 1929, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's Iron and Steel Division.

Total shipments of such materials during the month amounted to 261,269 gross tons, compared with 151,184 tons in February and 80,567 tons in March, 1933.

March exports of scrap iron and steel, amounting to 173,165 tons, were the largest ever recorded in any month and accounted for 66 per cent of the total tonnage exported.

A few of the gains contributing to the large volume of exports during the three-month period include the 208,855-ton increase registered by scrap by which the total of that trade reached 336,321 tons; the rise of tin plate exports from 10,732 tons to 64,894 tons; the 23,171-ton increase in the trade in heavy rails; and the gains of 11,059 tons in black steel sheets and 10,263 tons in galvanized steel sheets.

The Far East was, as usual, the chief foreign outlet for United States iron and steel exports, March shipments to that area accounting for 43.7 per cent of the month's total. Europe, because of purchases of scrap, constituted the second largest market with shipments amounting to 35.7 per cent of the total.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, May 2 (AP).—Directors of Mengel Co. have declared operative as of May 10 the plan for extending by five years the 7 per cent mortgage bonds which matured March 1. More than 80 per cent of the amount outstanding, $2,958,600, was deposited in favor of the extension.

The New York Telephone Co. reports a gain of 4,474 stations in April, contrasting with a loss of 14,575 in the same month last year. The net gain for the first four months of 1934 was 11,185 telephones, whereas in the same period of 1933 there was a loss of 70,917.

Directors of Homestake Mining Co. have declared the usual monthly dividends of $1 extra and $1 regular, payable May 25 to stock of record May 15.

Roy E. Tilles, vice president of Onyx Hosiery, Inc., says that for the first time in four years hosiery manufacturers "now feel that the industry in general is facing a change for the better." The firm stand taken by the hosiery code authority, he believes, promises to end "demoralizing competition and leading manufacturers believe improvement will result." Onyx has formed a sales corporation which will effect a complete change in the company's system of distribution. Heretofore it has sold direct to the retail trade, but beginning May 15 it will offer its goods to wholesalers.

Germany's Import Curb On Hides Is Prolonged

A German government decree has prolonged until May 25, 1934, the prohibition of purchases abroad of hides and skins, which was to expire on May 5, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from Acting Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, Berlin.

U. S. Dollar Gains On Foreign Marts

(Associated Press.)

While the American dollar was a little irregular in terms of sterling yesterday, it maintained a steady tone in relation to the European gold currencies.

Owing to increased commercial demand, the United States unit strengthened in London and closed there 1⅛ cents higher at 5.11¼ to the pound. In New York, however, sterling later finished with a net gain of 1¾ cents at $5.12¼.

London advanced the price of gold 4 pence to 136 shillings 3½ pence (approximately $34.81 an ounce at the British closing rate) and $4,074,785 of the metal was purchased at this level.

The dollar closed in Paris with an advance of 3½ centimes at an equivalent of 6.622 cents to the franc, but in New York French funds finished unchanged at 6.63 cents.

Based on the final New York franc rate, the dollar was at a premium of .05 of a cent, the same as yesterday, which was comparable with a premium of .77 of a cent a month ago.

Shanghai and Hongkong dollars failed to rally, notwithstanding the recovery of nearly a cent an ounce in the price of bar silver, and these currencies ended unchanged at their yesterday's reduced rates.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange today. Oil shares strengthened, while rubber stocks improved on the higher price of that commodity. German bonds recovered after a weak opening. Kaffirs held generally firm. West African gold mining shares were dull, and transatlantic issues improved. The market closed steady.

Paris—Although rentes lost part of their recent gains, industrials continued to advance on the bourse, particularly chemical, electric, rubber and young loan issues. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Trading on the boerse was quiet today. Dye shares were especially low, and the market closed without recovery.

Goods Markets.

New York, May 2 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were firmer today following higher prices in speculative cotton market. Curtailment of production is expected to be carried on by individual action and not by committee arrangements in cotton goods and silks. Rayon yarns are steadier, and fabrics are firmer, with business a little more active. Silk printed goods are still the best sellers. Unfinished silks are quiet. Some inquiries for worsted dress goods for fall are considered very promising for future business for fall delivery. Burlaps were quiet and unchanged.

Rubber Closes Irregular.

New York, May 2 (A.P.).—Crude rubber futures closed irregular, 12c to 20c lower. May, 14.02@14.03; July, 14.22@14.23; September, 14.44@14.50; spot, nominal.

Cotton Climbs $1 Per Bale Under Buying

May Closes at 10.82 as General Market Rises 19 to 26 Points.

New York, May 2 (AP).—Cotton advanced slightly more than $1 a bale on covering combined with trade and commission house buying.

After selling up to 10.95 early, July reacted to 10.83, but offerings were comparatively light and the market firmed up again in the later trading. July advanced to 10.97 and closed at 10.96, with the general market closing very steady at net gains of 19 to 26 points.

Opening prices were 13 to 15 points higher in response to relatively firm Liverpool cables and foreign buying orders, as well as covering and some scattering demand from commission house sources.

Encounters Selling.

The early advance encountered some local and New Orleans selling, but it was absorbed on slight setbacks with the market working up to net advances of 19 to 22 points during the morning.

Demand tapered off after the close of Liverpool, while offerings increased somewhat on the advance, leading to reactions of 10 or 15 points from the best during the early afternoon.

The setback brought in renewed buying, however, and the demand became more active in the late trading when some positions reached the highest prices of the day. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the best.

According to the New York Cotton Exchange Service, sales of fertilizer tax tag sales in eight of the nine principal cotton growing States totaled 573,000 tons for April, against 856,000 for the same States last year.

Exports today, 43,759, making 6,642,442 so far this season. Port receipts, 10,730. U. S. port stocks, 2,942,829.

Loan Official Sees Business on Climb

An optimistic view of business conditions is voiced by Charles W. Schafer, treasurer of Oriental Building Association, 600 F street. Mr. Schafer is of the opinion that business is surging upward all along the line, improvement being especially noticeable in building and loan fields.

"We have just closed our books on one of the most active months in recent years," said Mr. Schafer, "and we feel that the month of May will be even more active. Inquiries from home owners are reaching us with increasing regularity, indicating that there is a definite determination and desire on the part of the home owner to take advantage of the present situation and rehabilitate and develop their present investment."

Oriental Building Association No. 6 is Washington's oldest building and loan association. Established in 1861 shortly before the War Between the States, it has long been identified as a Washington landmark.

New York Central Line Loads Rise in Week

New York, May 2 (AP).—New York Central's freight traffic last week totaled 101,429 cars, compared with 97,842 the previous week and 83,250 a year ago.

Freight car loadings on its own lines handled by the Southern Pacific Co. last week totaled 21,253, against 21,271 the preceding week and 19,165 in the 1933 period.

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway's April freight loadings totaled 121,432 cars, compared with 100,319 in the same 1933 month.

Trade Failures Fall Lowest in Past 10 Years

New York, May 2.—Dun's insolvency index for the first half of April was 62.1, compared with 64.2 for March and 114.2 and 156.1, respectively, for the corresponding periods of 1933 and 1932, respectively. The insolvency index for April promises to be the lowest for that or any other month in more than ten years.

The reduction in the insolvency index so far this year has been something more than seasonal. There was a decline in almost every month in 1933 until September, which was the lowest for that year. Business failures in September generally are at the low point of the year, so far as number is concerned.

Following September some increase usually is shown, and while the number was slightly larger in the first three months of 1933, the increase was trifling. At the opening of the new year, there was some further increase, as is usual, but it was not nearly so much as customarily appears. The improvement in the reports for the succeeding three months was very marked.

The insolvency index for the past ten months is compared below for several years, the figures being computed on the basis of the number of commercial insolvencies to each 10,000 firms in business:

Nearby County Enters 48 In Meet

Bethesda, Silver Spring Seek Honors in Maryland Games.

FORTY-EIGHT entries to the University of Maryland track meet Saturday will be sent by Bethesda and Silver Spring, bearing with them the hopes for a victory in the county high school class.

The teams entered will form a nucleus of the teams that will represent these schools in their coming meets and are mostly all veteran performers with one and two years' experience.

John Guckeyson, who put Bethesda on the map last year with his sterling performance, will be absent from the Bethesda squad, but with this exception the two schools are nearly intact. Leizear, however, will be missed by the Takomans.

Coach Owen Knight at Silver Spring is banking mainly on Jimmy Henderson in the 220, while Wiseman will be entered in the interscholastics in the 880.

Foulk and Smith Star.

Coach Kupka of the Bethesdans reports that Foulk in the shot put and Olin Smith in the 440 look best in practice and should earn places before the others.

Among the Silver Spring entries are B. Vandervoort in the 100, 220, broad jump and relay; R. Clark in the 100, 440, high jump and relay; H. Clark in the 220, shot put, and relay; Henderson in the 220 and relay; Wiseman in the 880 and also the interscholastic 880; C. Vandervoort in the broad jump and relay; Scoville in the 440 and high jump; Ferguson in the 100, Mason in the 440, Linkins and Muson in the 880, Freas and Xander in the shot put, Fitzgerald in the broad jump, Van Horn in the high jump, and McCeney in the relay.

Bethesda entrants include R. Brown in the 100 and 440, Foulk in the 100 and shot put, Amiss in the relay and broad jump, Mullen in the 100 and relay, Harris in the 440, Crofutt in the 880, S. Brown and James in the high jump, Lodge in the shot put, and Milanis and Melvein additional relay competitors.

Post Cup Golfers Provide Thrills

Miss Elizabeth Houghton, defending champion, won a thrilling 2 up victory from Miss Florence Scott, of Manor, on the twenty-seventh hole, and Mrs. N. J. Waldron, of Beaver Dam, had to travel 18 extra holes to decision Mrs. L. T. Powers, of Indian Spring, 2 up on the thirty-sixth hole, in the feature matches of yesterday's Washington Post match play with handicap golf tournament at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, low net winner, moved into the quarter-finals with a 3 and 2 victory over Mrs. George Parker, of Kenwood.

Virginia Nine to Play Carolina State Today

University, Va., May 2 (Spl.).—Virginia's baseball team left this afternoon by automobile for Raleigh, N. C., where North Carolina State is to be played tomorrow afternoon in the first of a three-game series away from home.

The Cavaliers will round out their last trip of the year with a pair of contests against North Carolina. The Tarheels are to be played Friday afternoon in Chapel Hill and again Saturday night in Greensboro.

Virginia will close the 1934 baseball season with two home games next week. The nine from West Virginia University comes to Lambeth Field next Wednesday and Thursday, May 9 and 10.

No Truth in Report Of Churchill Strike

Churchill Downs Race Track, May 2 (AP).—The Churchill Downs entries for tomorrow were not filled today until 2:30 p. m., four hours late. Charles F. Price, presiding steward, investigated a report that turfmen were striking in an attempt to force increases in purses from $800 to $800, but found it without foundation. Lack of a spring race meeting at Lexington, resulting in retarded training of many horses, was assigned as one reason for the difficulty, while many horses here are merely in training for later race meetings at other tracks.

Cycle Grind at Seattle.

Seattle (AP).—Six-day bicycle racing will be inaugurated in Seattle next fall under the sponsorship of the National Cycling Association. The dates tentatively set are September 30 to October 6.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Chase Me, a horse owned by Mrs. John Bosley, jr., of Monkton, Md., was never considered a fast horse until one day his remarkable speed was accidentally discovered while he was pacing another horse from the same stable. He was at that time a 4-year-old and had never been in a race.

He was subsequently entered in several races, and won every one of his first six starts. Chase Me had always been a family pet, and especially a pet of the children—racing was something entirely new to him. When he was lined up with the other horses in his first race he playfully offered to "shake hands" with one of the assistant starters, a trick he had been taught by children.

Outstanding among his victories was the Bryan and O'Hara Memorial Handicap at Bowie, Md., with Johnny Gilbert riding.

Biologists at St. Louis University verified the report that a hen owned by Bernard Pleis had laid a black egg. They agreed that there must have been something wrong with the hen's metabolism—something she ate, no doubt.

Radio Waves and Ripples

SOME of the little woman's prized china and that occasional chair we don't like face destruction or serious damage, what with Ellsworth Vines about to give a series of tennis lessons on N. B. C. and what with Cousin John being a very enthusiastic tenniser who's apt to dash into the room anytime in a whirl of forehand drives—and without any inducement like an opportunity for instruction from a tenniser like Mr. Vines, either.

Cousin John's athletic urges are strongest when he's indoors, and likely as not to well up uncontrollably in a room full of relatives, what-nots and bric-a-brac. The relatives usually survive by a quick and prudent evacuatory maneuver. But the what-nots and bric-a-brac . . . the little woman and I have given up having them.

There was a time when John's propensity for shadow boxing in his room several hours after everyone else had gone to bed, and swinging golf clubs beneath the living room candelabra, made us long for the days when assault and battery on our dear cousin was a delightful item on our daily schedule, simply executed under the guise of boxing lessons. But since the little woman bought that chair, we've been trying to think of ways of interesting John in wood-chopping as wholesome sport and exercise.

A SIMPLIFIED application of Dr. Nevil Monroe Hopkins' radio voting scheme has been tried out by WOR in New York, and now the editors of the Sunday Call and the Evening News know how the people of Newark really feel about State parks along New Jersey's coast and tuning far-away stations.

Ultimately, under the doctor's plan, a reactive apparatus attached to the receiver will enable the voter to express his wishes by pushing a button. His scheme not yet having reached that stage of development, listeners were asked merely to turn off their receivers for three seconds. Dr. Hopkins and a group of his confreres tabulated the votes by observing reactions on various types of meters in a sub-power station controlling the area.

Result, 24,000 to 22,000 for State parks, 48,000 to 12,000 for long-distance radio listening.

The thing had been brewing for some time, so WJSV's hired hands failed to register the surprise usually accorded sudden weddings when Announcer Harold Gray and Pat Ickler, comely Fox Film secretary, ran over to Baltimore for knot-tying exercises Tuesday.

For some reason or other it has been customary for prospective brides and bridegrooms to assume pre-nuptial attitudes of "We've done this thing before and know what we're about." That, probably, was responsible for Gray first making application for license in the Orphans' Bureau of Baltimore's courthouse.

Harris Hull, who handles the Postilion, The Post's nightly news broadcast, has worked nearly 400 programs without knowing from one week to the next exactly what his operating schedule would be. N. B. C. has that all straightened out now, and, Mr. Hull tells us, barring acts of Providence and network commercials, he can be found on WMAL'S 630 kilocycles at the following times:

Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 10 p. m.; Monday, 9:45 p. m.; Saturday, 9:15 p. m.

LORETTA LEE, featured star with George Hall's orchestra, renders just the right amount of sadness as a singer of "blues." During her appearance at Loew's Fox next week she will probably be heard over WJSV with other Columbia stars current on the same bill.

Every time WRC's Aunt Sue counts votes in that election she is running for the members of the Poodlescatstown Club, the Poodlescatstown politicians are handed another upset. Early this week it looked as though Pep, the monkey, would surely win.

But today Pink Eye has the lead, though it isn't a very substantial one, with 79 votes. Pep is second with 73, just one vote ahead of Brown Doggie. Cinnamon Bear, the present president and long a popular favorite, has climbed into fourth place with 61 votes and is beginning to look like a contender.

Aunt Sue's young men and women have the rest of the week in which to vote, so we won't make any more predictions.

Whitecaps.

WRC—President Roosevelt accepts the William Jennings Bryan statute, 4 p. m.; Cab Calloway, Frances Williams and Igor Gorin join Rudy Vallee, 7 p. m.; Nikita Balieff makes another program with Paul Whiteman, 9 p. m.

WMAL—Lyman Beecher Stowe, son of Harriet Beecher Stowe, reminisces on the "good old days," 2:15 p. m.; Radio Joe brings William T. McCracken, central figure in the Senate air mail hearings, and Daniel Frohman, theatrical producer, to the microphone for the benefit of Air Derby Day and the actors' benefit, 9:15 p. m.; La Paree orchestra, midnight.

WJSV—President Roosevelt accepts Bryan memorial, 4 p. m.; Mischa Levitzki, concert pianist, Voice of America guest artist, 7:30 p. m.; Connie Boswell sings Harold Arlen's new hit song, "Ill Wind," 9 p. m.

Bears Have Discus Prospect.

Berkeley, Calif. (AP). — Competing with high school athletes, Glenn Randal, University of California freshman, threw the discus 148 feet ½ inch to demonstrate that Stanford's weight monopoly may soon be challenged. He took first place by 28 feet.

Track Carnival Attracts 400 Schoolboys

Five District High Schools in U. of Maryland Meet Scheduled Saturday.

MORE than 400 athletes, representing 52 high and prep schools, a record entry, will compete in the University of Maryland annual track and field carnival scheduled Saturday at College Park. Thirteen more schools than were entered last year will be in action.

Heading the list are all of the Washington high schools, Tech, Central, Eastern, Western and Roosevelt. Nearly every school of note in the State of Maryland has entered and there are some from distant points, notably Irvington School, of Tarrytown, N. Y.

Tech May Repeat.

Tech, winner of the interscholastic trophy last year with a total of 37 points, has enrolled 34 men in this year's games and is favored to repeat. Tech's squad is the largest entered.

Bel Air, winner of the county high school trophy last year, will be represented by a strong squad, including Jack Archer and Harford Cronin, brothers of two Terp varsity trackmen, and will be an important contender. Bel Air's strongest opposition will come from Hagerstown High School, which is sending 19 men to the meet.

Though overshadowed by the scholastic runners, the dual meet between Maryland and William and Mary will be a feature of the program. Monroe Little, the Indians' great all-round athlete, and Earl Widmyer and Warren Evans, Maryland's sprint aces, loom as the outstanding individual performers.

Rounding out the program is a basket ball game between the Old Liners and West Virginia and a lacrosse match between the home team and St. John's of Annapolis. Maryland feels that it can win the National collegiate championship if its stick wielders successfully hurdle the Johnnies.

Stoefen Here, Not Against Pro Tennis

Says He Has Not Given Idea Serious Thought; Vies at Chevy Chase.

LESTER STOEFEN, the powerful young Lochinvar who came out of the West to project himself into the National tennis limelight earlier in the season, only to ride into a slump, has no compunctions against turning professional, he said yesterday shortly after libering up on the Chevy Chase courts in preparation for the Invitation Doubles at the club tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

"I really haven't given the pro business a lot of thought, but I see no wrong in turning pro," the Davis Cup candidate declared, adding that he admired his fellow companion from the Pacific Coast, Ellsworth Vines, for accepting the lucrative offer to join the Tilden troupe.

Stoefen, who arrived here in advance of the other stars of the tennis firmament—Frank Shields, Wilmer Allison, Gregory Mangin and Johnny Van Ryn—admitted that foremost in his mind now is a place on the Davis Cup team.

Asked to what he attributed his recent slump in tae tournaments at White Sulphur and Hot Springs, the curly-haired blonde and partner of George Lott in the National doubles championship, said:

"It's the disagreeable weather, but I feel sure that I will regain my stride with the doubles play at Chevy Chase."

Stoefen played an 18-hole round of golf at Chevy Chase Monday, and yesterday afternoon spent considerable time on the courts playing with Lawrence T. Baker, Tom Mangan and Clarence Charest. He was hitting his shots at top speed.

Preliminary matches will be played in the doubles tomorrow. Second and third rounds are slated Friday, and the semifinals and finals Saturday. An international field will be on hand, what with Gerald Patterson, Australian Davis Cupper, and Manuel Alonso, the colorful Spaniard, entered.

Bonus March On White House Planned Today

Leader Says 1,000 Will Join in Demand for 'Room and Board.'

A thousand World War veterans will parade to the White House this afternoon to demand "room and board" for themselves and other veterans marching on the Capital to demand the bonus, their leaders said yesterday.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, granted permission for the parade which will start from John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue at 2 p. m. Application was made by Harold Hickerson, secretary of the veterans' National rank and file committee.

Police depreciated Hickerson's statement that there were 1,000 veterans already in the city who would participate in the parade. Hickerson claims that the city's "flop houses" already hold nearly that number.

The first contingent from New York, a busload of 40 men, arrived yesterday. They took quarters at the Transient Relief Lodge, Hickerson said. Today the group will ask the President for better lodging.

Hickerson said that veterans from North Carolina declared that Sergt. Alvin York, famous World War hero, was leading a contingent of 500 men from that State and Tennessee. He also said that 1,000 were mobilizing at New York, while other groups will be starting from Chicago, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, to be here on May 10.

Hickerson said that he had received no reply from the committee's letter to the President announcing today's parade to the White House. Yesterday he sent another message, he said.

Katharine Hepburn Silent on Divorce

"My Private Life Is of No Interest," She Says.

Havana, May 2 (AP).—Katharine Hepburn, red-haired American actress, paused here briefly today in her airplane journey to Miami from Merida, Yucatan, where she sought a divorce from her New York businessman husband, Ludlow Smith. She refused to discuss her domestic affairs.

"I never make statements and my private life should be of no interest to the public," she maintained.

Asked if she had accomplished her purpose in the Mexican city, she replied: "Well, I saw the ruins at Merida; that's what everyone goes there to see."

Dogs Fare Better Than Children of Poor, Briton Says

London, May 2 (AP).—Charges that dogs of Great Britain's well-to-do are better cared for than children of the unemployed and that King George lends his patronage to such conditions were made in the House of Commons tonight by the Laborite Aneurin Bevan.

Tense moments passed as Bevan insisted on bringing the monarch's name into debate contrary to strict house rules.

Waving a circular from dog homes in Surrey—of which he declared the king is a patron—Bevan read a list of expenses for dogs and cats, ranging from about 30 cents a day for those of fox terrier size to 45 cents a day for great danes and St. Bernards.

Members of the House of Commons usually ignore that rare references to the soverign in debates, since a ban on using his name to influence legislation is one of the oldest and most rigidly enforced rules of Parliament.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

The Cubs Have a "High Old Time"

By D. Sam Cox.

The next day was awfully windy. It blew so hard that Bettie told them all that they had better eat enough breakfast to last them till night, when she reckoned the wind would go down, for she wasn't going to have another scrap of fire in the house as long as that awful wind kept blowing.

There wasn't a one of them that believed there wouldn't be plenty of dinner, but what Bettie said did give them the best sort of excuse for eating every corn cake that Bettie and Grandma Bear would cook, and it made them wish that nothing had been said about having no dinner.

And now what to do with those restless children, Benny and Jenny, who hung around the house because it was so windy, nobody knew, until that thinking fellow, Jocko Monkey, thought about the kites he and his cousin, Rangy Tang, used to make at school, when they were boys. So he asked Bettie to bring out the pieces of big wrapping paper and the strings that were around all those packages that Mr. Man sent them, and he would see if he couldn't make some use of that awful wind and, at the same time, do something to keep the children from worrying their mother to death about something they could do in the house.

If you know any of Jocko's kinfolks, you know that these monkeys have mighty quick and limber fingers, and you know that they watch mighty closely what they see somebody else do; so you needn't be surprised to hear that Jocko soon had a kite that was about as long as the wagon on which he making it, and you know that a kite as big as that will catch a lot of wind. If you don't believe it, come on and see what happens down at the lake when Jocko pays out a lot of the cord.

No, Jocko didn't use that little twine that came around the packages: the kite was too heavy and the wind too strong, so he tied Hee-Haw's lines and Bettie's clothes lines together, and if he hadn't his kite would have soon been away down toward the Creek Country, with nobody holding it. As it was, the minute Jocko threw the kite up, the wind caught it, and began dragging it up and over the lake. Then the wind died down a little and didn't pull so strong.

"Now maybe you children can stay in the house without tearing it down, for a while," Bettie said to Benny and Jenny, as she tucked their bibs around their necks, and set big bowls of hot peas before them.

"A house with this sort of folks and this sort of dinner is good enough for me," Benny said, as he reached for his spoon.

Beg Your Pardon

It was stated inadvertently in The Washington Post's account Tuesday of the Supreme Court's decision regarding the Illinois Bell Telephone case, that Justice Pierce Butler dissented from the conclusion reached by the court. Justice Butler concurred in the result, but wrote an opinion setting forth additional views regarding depreciation charges, a point at issue.

$3 DELIVERS THIS REMARKABLE NEW ROYAL
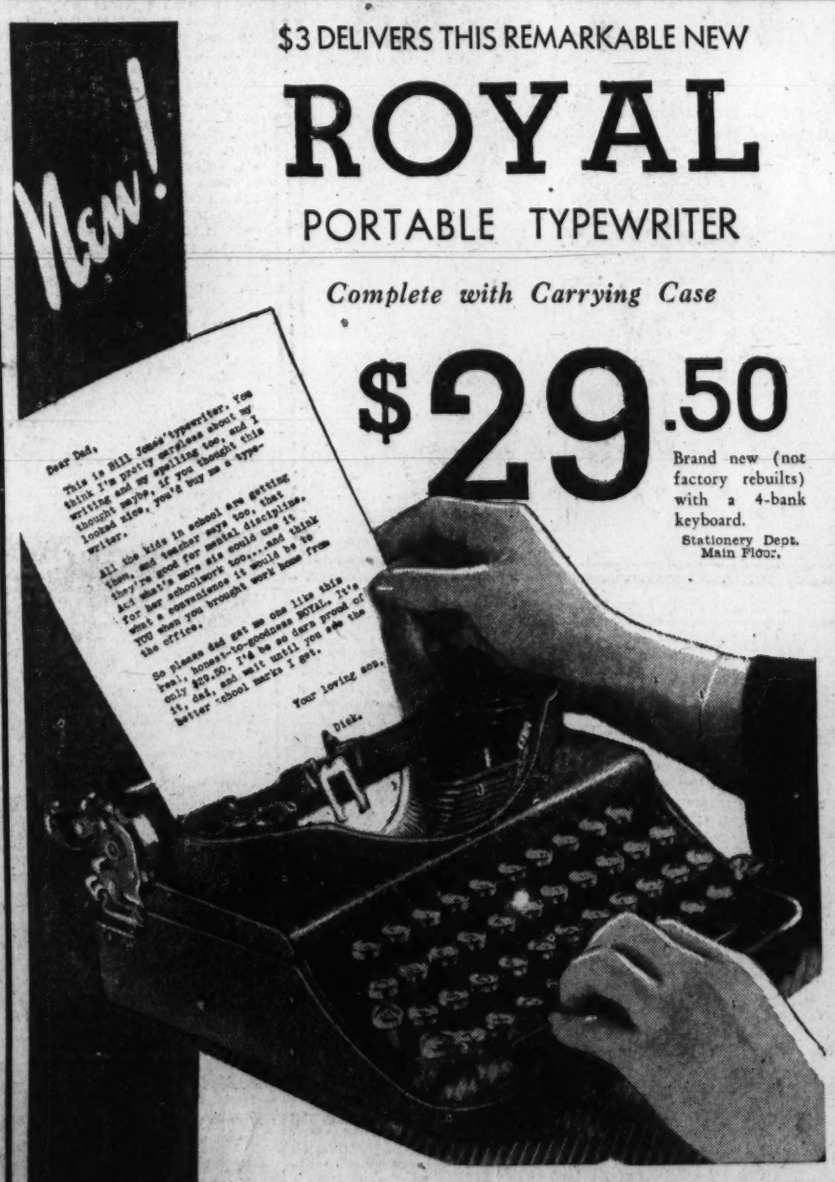
PORTABLE TYPEWRITER
Complete with Carrying Case

New!



Dear Dad,
This is Bill Jones' typewriter. You think I'm pretty peerless about writing and my spelling too, and I thought maybe, if you thought this looked nice, you'd buy me a typewriter.
All the kids in school are getting them, and teacher says too, that they're good for mental discipline. And what's more she could use it for her schoolwork too...and think what a convenience it would be to you when you brought work home from the office.
So please dad get me one like this real, honest-to-goodness ROYAL. It's only $29.50. I'd be so darn proud of it, dad, and wait until you see the better school marks I get.
Your loving son,
Dick.
